WANTED.

The Enterprise has a position open for a bright and hustling young man, who can devote a part or a whole of his time to newspaper work. Good inducements to the right party.

Apply at office,
38 P. O. Building,
Arlington.

SOME FACTS AND FIGURES.

That comparisons are odious, is a threadbare saying, but comparisons often become necessary where one's business is being misrepresented in order to build up another's. It having come to our knowledge, on several occasions that Enterprise subscribers and advertisers have been solicited to give their patronage and support to a young contemporary and in some cases urged to substitute that contemporary for the Enterprise, and by grossly misrepresenting the business status of the Enterprise Company, have in some cases succeeded in their efforts, partly on their misrepresentation, and partly on the plea that the publisher was a worthy, but needy citizen, making an honest effort to obtain a living in the newspaper calling. The Enterprise agrees with the latter statement and believes it correct to the very letter, and does not envy or begrudge its contemporary one particle of success its honest efforts deserve, but the Enterprise thinks that the advertiser who cuts out his advertising in the Enterprise in order to support its young contemporary is cutting off the hand that gives the charity, and the subscriber who discontinues the Enterprise to contribute to the success of the same contemporary is the only loser by the transaction; however, they are so few that for charity's sake they can be spared. Further, the Enterprise declares most emphatically that it is in business the same as any other reputable business concern for the living and income there is in the business. It is no charity enterprise, but a strict business proposition, rendering to its readers and advertisers full value for what they pay. It does not ask the patronage of the public because it was first and oldest but because it is fresh, new, up-to-date, sane and sensible, and gives to the reader the largest amount of news and editorial comments for his money, and to the advertiser, the largest circulation. We challenge ANY paper in our field to prove a larger circulation. And as for our young contemporary who has by the personal solicitation of its representative so wrongly misrepresented us, we submit the following facts and figures. Taking its last issue as a fair average that paper gave its readers less than 110 inches of local reading matter in its columns, divided as follows: 8-3-4 inches editorial comment on minor matters of little consequence; 26 inches editorial matter in large type (which would have occupied but 15 inches in ordinary size type); 26 1-2 inches Arlington news of current events and local happenings; 21 inches of Lexington news; and 26 INCHES OF "PUFFS" given to stores and business men devoid of news of particular interest. Of the 26 1-2 inches of Arlington news 14-2 inches was of events that were reported in the Enterprise which was on sale at the news stores Wednesday afternoon, fully 60 hours previous to the appearance of our contemporary and of the 21 inches of Lexington news, 12 had been reported in the Enterprise.

In other words, 12 inches of Arlington news, 9 of Lexington news, was all the reader got for his nickel, while on the other hand the Enterprise gave its readers for only three cents nearly 300 inches of choice news of local events, social functions and editorial comments, all boiled down and concisely treated and divided as follows: Arlington news, 128 1-2 inches; Lexington news, 56 inches; pertinent local editorial comments and assertions, 27 inches; editorial comment on general subjects by our own staff, 21 inches; Belmont and Waverley correspondence, 40 inches; exclusive press notices of theatres or paid readers of any nature whatever. In addition to this we presented our readers with a large amount of neighborhood news and correspondence, literary review, and general miscellany, original with the Enterprise, while our last Lexington edition contained an amount of Lexington news even greater than above mentioned, and while we are giving the best paper, containing the most news, we also lead in giving the most important news. These are no idle boasts—the facts and figures are in our office as well as the files of the Enterprise to show that in the last two years over 75 per cent of the best and most interesting and important news that occurred without pre-arrangement was "scooped" by the Enterprise before all other local papers.

We have other contemporaries that when the superfluous padding of columns are stripped and the news boiled down to actual facts and occurrences, divorced from editorial peroration and gush would contain no more type than our columns.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

EDITOR THE ENTERPRISE:

January 10, 1903.

Dear Sir:—At the annual meeting of the First Universalist Society on Thursday evening, the following motion was passed: We, the members of the First Universalist Society of Arlington, assembled in annual meeting, extend to the Arlington Enterprise our thanks for the unfailing courtesies extended to our society, and the various societies connected with it.

Yours truly,
CHARLES F. COOLIDGE,
Clerk.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Dr. Harry L. Alderman of East Lexington, had a narrow escape from what might have proved a serious runaway accident, last Wednesday afternoon. About four o'clock he was driving down Massachusetts avenue in his sleigh when his horse, which is a young mare highly valued by him, took fright near Water street. At the transfer station the sleigh struck the curbstone, throwing Dr. Alderman out, but he pluckily hung on to the reins and was dragged fully fifty feet up onto the lawn of the Unitarian church, where the horse stumbled, and in getting up got tangled in the shafts and harness, and came to a standstill. Fortunately, even the sleigh was not damaged and Dr. Alderman escaped without a scratch.

MONEY AND CHECKS GONE.

Although Mrs. Ida Brigham lives at "The Outlook," Arlington Heights, she took no cue from the name of her abode when she went into a leading Tremont street store last week, to examine some goods. But someone else was on the outlook without doubt, for when Mrs. Brigham turned to pick up her pocketbook, which she had left on the counter—the counter was bare—of pocketbooks. Cash to the amount of $84 and checks for about $160, were tucked away in the purse. The checks were undorsed, and in that respect, at least, Mrs. Brigham has the laugh on the thieves.—Post.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

Luscombe Searelle's comic opera, "Bobadil," is now in full swing at the Columbia theatre, and has received a kindly reception. As is usual in all new productions, changes for the better will be constantly made, the comedy work will be amplified, and generally the ensemble keyed up. Among the most pleasing songs are "Love Me," as sung by Miss Lane; "Pop, pop," by Mr. Nelson; "Motherland," as rendered by Miss Isabelle Underwood, and the "Jabberwocky" duet by Mr. Sam Edwards and Miss Salinger.

VERDI ORCHESTRA'S CONCERT.

Although not crowded, the town hall, Arlington, held a large and appreciative audience last Monday evening, at the public concert given by the Verdi Orchestra Club. The director is Mr. William Marshall of Haverhill, and under his able leadership the club again demonstrated their musical ability. This is the first time that the people of Arlington have had the opportunity of hearing this organization, although a concert was given in the town hall, Lexington, a few weeks ago. The club had the assistance of Miss Mary Margaret Mills, reader, who "took" in each of her numbers. (Miss Flora Clifford, who was announced for the concert was taken ill and Miss Mills was engaged in her place).

THE DOG SHOW.

Owners and breeders of bench show candidates from all sections of New England are looking forward to the nineteenth annual dog show to be held in Mechanics Building, Boston, Feb. 23, 24, 25 and 26. This show will follow the annual exhibition of the Westminster Kennel Club to be held in Madison Square Garden, New York, beginning Feb. 11, and it will bring together the finest lot of sporting and pet dogs ever seen in New England. The dog show has always been a very attractive event in Boston and the New England Kennel Club has an enviable reputation for the thoroughly sportsmanlike manner in which its annual functions are conducted. This year a number of men prominent in the social and financial world have rallied to the support of the Boston Dog Show and the most distinguished patron is Thomas W. Lawson, who is himself a leading exhibitor and the owner of one of the most sumptuously equipped private kennels in America at his Dream-wold estate. Mr. Lawson's hobby in the dog line consists of English bull dogs and toy terriers, and with the idea of promoting the best interests of these breeds he has given the New England Kennel Club $300 in money, to be divided in prizes of $100 each.

The extra money received from Mr. Lawson and the club members, together with the regular list of prizes in money and plate, will bring the total amount of the premium list up to $7000. The entries will close Feb. 7 with the secretary, 621 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

The fewest words that will convey the advertiser's ideas are the right ones.—Horace Greeley.

Hammer away the particulars of your business continually, and they (the people), in time, seeing you advertise so often, will reach the natural conclusion that you are pleasing other people by your goods and prices, and you want to please them, too. The result is their trade.—Chester, Pa., Evening News.

FEWER GALLONS: WEARS LONGER.

ARLINGTON.

Miss Mary Turnhill formerly of Arlington but now of Waterbury, Conn., was in town last week.

Mr. C. H. Wharton, long a resident of this town, has been dangerously ill at his home in Abington, but is now slowly improving.

Appliances for saving life have been placed at the stations about Mystic Lake in readiness for accidents.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Wells celebrated the 22th anniversary of their marriage on Saturday evening, January 10, at their home on Massachusetts Avenue.

The Arlington Veteran Firemen's Association will give a dancing assembly and entertainment Wednesday evening of next week in Menotomy hall.

The Hon. James A. Bailey, Jr., had a seat at the head table at the banquet given to retiring President Goetting of the Republican State committee last week.

The New England Consolidated Ice Co., otherwise known as the "ice trust" are building a new ice house of large capacity on the shore of Spy pond near the railroad. This company recently absorbed the business of C. W. Illsley.

The alarm from box 46 early Wednesday morning was for a slight fire in the boiler room of Thomas Hill's greenhouse on Dudley street, which was promptly extinguished by the company, with little damage.

Miss Florence Perkins, teacher of the ninth grade of the High school, has received leave of absence for six weeks and will accompany her parents and brother on a trip to California for her health. Miss Perkins' home is in Waterville, Me.

Mr. Frank S. Sutcliffe, superintendent of the Arlington Public Schools, has been confined to his house since the holiday recess with sciatic rheumatism. At this writing he is considerably improved.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank held Tuesday afternoon, Jas. A. Bailey, Jr., was elected a member of the Board of Directors to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. D. Higgins.

A timely and interesting subject is to be discussed this evening before the Arlington Improvement Association, namely: "Shall the town of Arlington locate the primary schools where the children are, or oblige them to go long distances to them; shall they be built of wood or brick?"

On Wednesday morning, the large plate glass window in front of the new National Bank quarters, in the Savings Bank building, was badly cracked. The heat from the large radiator lately put in position in front of the window caused it.

The next meeting of the Bradshaw Missionary Society will be held February 2, when some of the ladies connected with the Shredded Wheat company, will give a demonstration and lunch in the church parlor.

LeBaron & Johnson have been awarded the contract for installing a compressed air signal for the fire alarm system of the city of Augusta, Me. This will be similar although larger than one installed by them in Lewiston about four years ago. Mr. LeBaron returned last Wednesday from a trip through Maine on business.

Last evening a lecture on Socialism was held under the auspices of the Arlington Equal Suffrage league in the Town Hall. Mrs. Widdington of England was the speaker. She is a member of the Fabian society and a recognized leader among socialists.

Thursday afternoon, January 16, in Associates' Hall, at three o'clock, Mr. Richard Burton will speak before the Arlington Woman's Club, his subject being "The Drama as a Social Force." Gentlemen's night occurs Thursday, January 29, in town hall, when Mrs. Waldo Richards has been engaged to read.

A meeting of the Unitarian Club was held in the church parlors, Thursday evening. Prof. George H. Bartlett, principal of the Massachusetts State Normal Art School, addressed the meeting on "Lessons Gleaned from Nature and Their Application to Art." Prof. Bartlett's address was very instructive as well as interesting, and gave many a broader insight into the topic. Caterer Hardy furnished a delightful supper in the parlors of the church.

There was some rattling good coasting on Irving street last week and large numbers availed themselves of it. The coast started at the head of Jason street, down Irving and across Pleasant street into Spring Valley where a well steered doublerunner continued onto Spy Pond for thirty or forty feet. Saturday evening in the light of the almost full moon there was a large crowd out both of young and older. The crossing of Pleasant street makes it rather dangerous, although Saturday evening a guard with a whistle was stationed there. However, on Saturday afternoon a narrow escape from accident took place. A heavily laden double runner, with both boys and girls, ran into the rear wheel of a passing team on Pleasant street, but fortunately only the doublerunner received any damage.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS.

Mrs. C. G. Brockway has been quite ill the past week with an attack of grip.

Miss Edna White is able to be about once more.

Mrs. Abbott of Manchester, N. H., is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. C. T. Parsons.

The M. M. M. Club met with Miss Alice White on last Thursday evening.

John R. McAllister and family of Massachusetts avenue have moved to Forest street.

Mr. W. O. Partridge left town on Saturday for New York. He was accompanied by his wife and Mrs. George C. Tewksbury.

Miss Alice Knowland is enjoying her vacation at her mother's home, Mrs. Theodore Merrick on Claremont avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nicoll have closed their home on Crescent Hill and will locate with Mrs. S. A. Snow, mother of Mrs. Nicoll, on Tanager street for the winter.

Mrs. Olive Hill is enjoying a much needed vacation from her store on Massachusetts avenue and hopes to return greatly benefited by the rest.

George Klingner, an employe of the Theodore Schwab Company, while running a buzz saw last Thursday afternoon, lost two fingers of the left hand. Dr. Hooker was called and dressed the wound.

Officers have been elected by the Crescent Hill Club as follows: J. T. Luak, President; W. C. Weston, Vice-President; H. K. Brown, Treasurer; John J. Barker, Secretary. The board of directors, J. T. Luak, C. H. Jukes, C. H. Bartlett, J. Kirchmayer, E. E. Whittier.

Lulu Bernice, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Littlefield of Westboro, Mass., (the latter formerly Miss Gertrude Swett, of the Heights) died on January 2, from scarlet fever, after an illness of only twenty-four hours.

Mrs. Jercegan entertained the Sunshine Club, of which she is president, at her daughter, Mrs. Schenck's home, on last Wednesday afternoon. The regular business of the club was disposed of, after which the rest of the afternoon was devoted to whist. Mrs. Gertrude E. Maggett, president of the Massachusetts State Federation honored the occasion by her presence.

Among the guests registered at the Robbins Spring hotel this week are: Mr. and Mrs. Theo. D. Dupee, Miss Colluppy, Arlington Heights; Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Colver, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Donchin, Rev. WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.
Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 5, 1903.

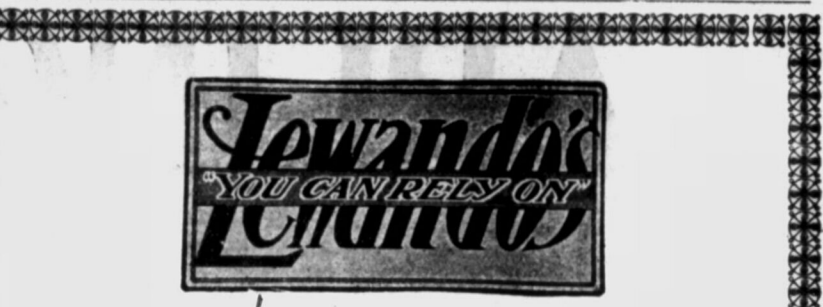

One of the most brilliant state receptions ever witnessed in Washington took place on New Year's day. Bright sunshine and a temperature almost balmy added to the comfort of the guests and the remodeled interior of the White House contributed to the interest of the occasion. Following the usual custom, the President, assisted by Mrs. Roosevelt, the members of the Cabinet and their families, received the justices of the Supreme Court, the members of the diplomatic corps in their elaborate uniforms, the officers of the army, navy and marine corps, all in full dress uniform, and several thousand civilians, and the whole scene presented a picture kaleidoscopic in color and animated in the extreme. In the front corridor the Marine Band rendered an elaborate program while diplomats, officers, senators and civilians stood about chatting and admiring the new and beautiful decorations.

Following the reception at the White House, Secretary Hay entertained the entire diplomatic corps at breakfast. With the exception of Mrs. Hay, and Mrs. Root and Mrs. Hitchcock who are in mourning, the ladies of the Cabinet received their friends at various hours throughout the afternoon and evening. The Secretary of the Navy received with Mrs. Dewey, the Admiral being absent with the fleet. Many changes have taken place in the diplomatic corps during the past year, but the absence most commented upon was that of Julian, Lord Pauncefote, the late British Ambassador, who died last spring. He was a general favorite and his absence was noted with many regrets. Herr von Holleben, the German Ambassador, who is not particularly popular, is now dean of the corps and was the first of the foreigners to greet the President. One of the pleasant incidents of the day was the call paid by Senor Ojeda, the Spanish Minister, to Mrs. Dewey, wife of the officer to whom the Spanish fleet surrendered in Manila Bay, and the man most responsible for the loss of the Philippines to Spain.

To a very remarkable extent politics have given place to society during the holiday season, the President setting the example by entertaining a large house party and remaining away from his office as much as circumstances would permit. Many members of Congress left Washington to return today, when the second half of the second session of the Fifty-seventh Congress convenes at noon. While legislation has lagged and politics have been dull during the past two weeks, there is every reason to believe that the ensuing two months will be marked by exceptional activity. Ordinarily, the last session of a Congress is devoted almost exclusively to the passage of the regular appropriation bills, but this year there are many important matters demanding attention. The statehood bill is still on the Senate calendar and is the regular order of business. During the holidays a second bill has been drafted admitting Oklahoma and Indian Territory as one state. The Cuban treaty awaits ratification or rejection and the same is true of the New Foundland treaty. Senator Cullom is determined to secure some consideration of the Kasso reciprocity treaties which he declares should be disposed of if only as a matter of courtesy to the countries party to them. Trust legislation still occupies a large share of attention and will doubtless monopolize a considerable portion of the time of Congress between now and the 4th of March.

The latest contribution to the anti-trust agitation consists of the Hoar bill, which the venerable senator from Massachusetts made public last week. The measure is sweeping in its provisions and, as was to be expected, was immediately attacked by persons opposed to anti-trust legislation. The most important opposition so far expressed comes from Representative John J. Jenkins of Wisconsin. Mr. Jenkins is chairman of the committee on Judiciary, a majority of which committee must be won to the support of the bill before it can come before the House for action. A summary of Mr. Jenkins' opinion is to the effect that the trusts have nothing to fear and the people nothing to gain by the passage of the bill. He further declares that the measure contains nothing new, apart from its phraseology.

After providing that $500,000 shall be placed at the disposal of the Attorney General for the prosecution of trusts, a sum already appropriated by the House for that purpose, Senator Hoar's bill enjoins absolute publicity for all corporations doing an interstate or foreign business, where there is not double liability on the part of stockholders. For combining in restraint of trade, exacting a contract from purchasers prohibiting the sale of goods below a stipulated price or for selling below the market price for the purpose of ruining a competitor, a penalty is imposed, to consist of $5,000 fine, or not exceeding one year's imprisonment or both, and the second conviction for violation of any provision of the law entails forfeiture of

Literary Notes

The Woman's Home Companion for January contains three unusually interesting feature articles. "The Great Work of the Presbyterian Church of America," "The Girl Who Wants to Come to New York," "Holiday Festivities in Cosmopolitan Washington," describing the midwinter merrymaking of Uncle Sam's official family. There are many other seasonable articles. Mrs. Herrick has a very helpful article on Cooking, and the Fashions, as usual, are extremely new and up to date. Published by The Crowell Publishing Co., Springfield, Ohio; one dollar a year; ten cents a copy; sample copy free.

THE NATIONAL MAGAZINE.
Edwin Markham and Admiral Schley lead the list of contributors to the January National Magazine. The Admiral writes of The Sailor's Christmas at Sea. Fine full page portraits of Congressman Cannon; the next Speaker, and of Senators Spooner, Clapp, Heifield and Hawley are among the illustrations of Joe Mitchell Chapple's Affairs at Washington. A fine group of interesting articles follow and the National's stories are always excellent. The poems are by Frederic Lawrence Knowles, Sam Walter Foss, Mary V. Hobart and Edward L. Peterson. The National's poetry is quoted everywhere. Don't miss this number.

CROUP.
The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medicine as directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by Laing's Drug Store, corner of Spring and Main streets, Watertown.

The Congregational and Baptist churches have united for the observance of the "week of prayer," holding joint meetings on Monday and Friday evenings at Waverley Hall. On Wednesday evening the Baptist church held a service at the house of Mr. Fred E. Sherman on Mill street, and the Congregational church one at the house of Mr. H. E. Carpenter on Trapelo Road.

The latest report in connection with the Clara Morton affair is a Thomas Goodeau who was arrested at Portsmouth N. H., on the charge of larceny. Members of the Belmont police force interviewed him at Portsmouth, but he satisfied them that he had no opportunity to have performed the deed and no knowledge that would be of service to them.

The "Little Helpers Society" of ten girls who raised over $100 last summer in aid of the Floating Hospital, held their first meeting of the year Wednesday afternoon at Col. E. C. Benton's on White street, elected officers and discussed plans for the season. They voted to receive four additional members, and elected Blanche Benton, president; Inez Smith, vice-president; Mary Scott, secretary; Ray Harris, treasurer. They are planning for another fair.

The union service at the Unitarian church last Sunday morning called forth an attendance that filled the house. After opening services by the two pastors, assisted by the Congregational choir, Rev. Geo. P. Gilman preached a sermon based on the text, Psalm 16:11. The address was brief and suggested by the opening year. Immediately after the preaching service the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered jointly by the pastors, Mr. Allen inviting all members of the congregations to remain and participate in Christian communion.

On Christmas Day Mr. Charles Armstrong, one of the oldest persons residing in this vicinity, died at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Walter W. Brown of Waverley Park. Mr. Armstrong, at the time of his death, was within three months of ninety-four years of age, and had lived at Waverley for twelve years. He was born at St. John, N. B., and descended from a family of loyalists who first settled that region. Although he had been in feeble health for some time, he retained his mental faculties, and, with the exception of severe deafness, was physically sound. Death was due to old age. He had been for many years an active member of the Baptist church. He was buried from the home of his granddaughter, Sunday, the 28th, Rev. Geo. P. Gilman conducting the funeral service. The interment was at Weston, Mass.

DISLOCATED HER SHOULDER.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by Laing's Drug Store, corner of Spring and Main streets.

If you can be satisfied with a small share of custom, you can afford to be economical in your advertising.—Sir Thomas Lipton.

Mayor Morse is in receipt of assurance from Mr. Carnegie's representative that an instalment of the cash donated by Mr. Carnegie toward the construction of a library building in Marlboro will be forwarded on the commencement of work on the structure.

Harvard University was the recipient of much financial assistance during the year, including gifts from prominent men and bequests from friends of the institution who had passed away. The medical branch of the institution was particularly favored, and with about $5,000 at their disposal the trustees are in a position to erect one of the finest medical institutions in the world.

Although many of those interested in the welfare of the Institute of Technology are inclined to believe that the institute required more room than it now possesses to properly develop, not by even the most active has a site for the proposed "Tech" been decided upon. Several locations have been mentioned and considered, but to no one of these does the majority lean decidedly enough to have it made public. Tech, as proposed, will be a magnificent institution.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The one sensational success of the season is Percy Williams' big scenic production of "Tracy, the Outlaw," in four acts and nine wonderful scenes. "Tracy, the Outlaw," a stirring drama in four acts and nine scenes will be presented for the first time in Boston at the Grand Opera house next week. The production is an elaborate one and the various stage pictures are beautiful and true to life. In point of scenery, it is one of the greatest productions that has ever visited this city.

Matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday as usual.

HER 87th BIRTH DAY.

Mrs. Sylvina P. Chandler.

Mrs. Sylvina Parris Chandler celebrated her 87th birthday last Tuesday. Mrs. Chandler has been a resident of Waverley for the past forty years, during which time she has become one of the best known and most highly esteemed residents of the town.

Mrs. Chandler was born in Pembroke, Mass., Jan. 6, 1816. She was the daughter of Luther Briggs, at that time a well-known North river shipbuilder.

At an early age, on her mother's death, she went to Boston to live with her uncle, Capt. Alexander Parris. She attended school in Charlestown and was a classmate of the late Charlotte Cushman.

In 1837 she married Commandant Benjamin F. Chandler, who was for 25 years civil engineer at the Portsmouth navy yard. After Mr. Chandler's retirement from Portsmouth, they moved to Waverley.

Mr. Chandler died in 1886. Eight children were born to the couple, but of these only two sons are living. Mrs. Chandler has, however three grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

Mrs. Chandler is in splendid health, mentally and physically, but owing to injuries resulting from a fall sustained about two years ago she is compelled to use crutches. She is very much interested in church and work, and until disabled was one of the most earnest workers in support of the Waverley Unitarian church.

Although she spent the day very quietly with her family and a few intimate friends, many letters of congratulations came from a very wide circle of friends who unite in wishing her many more years of life. With her present health this seems reasonable.

AN ALASKAN LANDSLIDE.

Rather leisurely, but Eating Up Groves and Fills River Beds.

All the morning as we chopped spongy cottonwood, blew out our lungs over the fire and flipped water from the blankets a dull roar which we thought the river swelled by the rain was growing louder, louder. I said, "I guess a moraine choked pond on the glacier has broken through," and just then Jack stepped out from under the soaked tarpaulin.

"Look at that, Bobbie, look at that!" I heard him shouting. Outside he was pointing across the stream. A landslide was roaring down a gully from the very top of the Rainbow hills. It was a stupendous sight. We looked at it silently and then said, both at once, "I thought an avalanche was sudden." This thing wiggled like a huge snake down a sheer 3,000 feet of rock. The roar seemed forever to increase. Dust or smoke trailed from this thing, and enormous boulders skipped solemnly from side to side of its path like pebbles. Water mingled with it, and when it reached the terrace it was a black stream, viscous and heavy.

Jack bet it wouldn't cross the half mile of flat to the river, but in a moment we saw boulders shooting out over the terrace and aspen groves fall as if laid with a scythe. A canorous fan ate out to the bank and gravelly sloped over like lumpy paint, cutting deep channels down to the river.—Outing.

A Place For His Boy.

Sol Smith Russell, who saw humor in many commonplace happenings, used frequently to tell of meeting an old farmer at a railway station in a small New York town whose philosophy was particularly pat, even though his deductions were hardly complimentary to the actor, says the Chicago Tribune. Russell and his companion were awaiting the train when the old gentleman walked up, eyed the star a minute or two and asked:

"Be you the feller that cut up capers at Parker's hall last night?"

"My company and I gave a performance there last evening, yes," replied Russell politely.

"I thought so. I was there, and I had to laugh sometimes. I wanted to tell you about my boy. He's just your way —ain't no good for work. Won't stick to anything, but wants to play clown and crack jokes all the time. He's got a job at the hub factory, but all he does is to keep the men a-laughin' when they order be workin'. You order take him 'long with your troupe, for he's the derndest fool I ever seen!"

Stewed Apples.

To stew apples so each quarter is unbroken and so clear one can almost see through it is an art, and yet it is a simple thing to do if one only knows how. Peel tart apples very thin, cut them in quarters and remove the cores and seeds. As fast as you can peel and quarter them drop the apples in a saucepan in which you have already placed cold water to the depth of two inches. When the apples are all in, put the saucepan over a slow fire, cover it till the water reaches the boiling point, then remove the cover and let the apples simmer almost imperceptibly till you can pierce them easily with a broom splint; then sprinkle the sugar over them and let them just simmer until it is all melted. Remove the saucepan from the fire and let it stand where the apples will get cold before turning them into a dish for the table.—Green's Fruit Grower.

The Samovar.

While it is generally known that the samovar is a distinctly Russian article, the fact may not be so familiar that in the land of the czar the manufacture of samovars is a privilege of the government, and the imperial crest is found upon every genuine Russian tea urn. The reason given for the government's engaging in this manufacturing business is that the samovar may be within the purchasing power of the humblest peasant, and it is therefore found in the humblest as well as the most pretentious home in the land. The real article is always heated by charcoal, but returned travelers, and particularly Americans, find it more convenient to have their samovar adapted for spirit lamp heating when intended for use in their own homes.

Not Detable.

"Have you any articles of value with you?" asked the customs inspector.

"Nothing," answered the returning traveler, "except a wealthy grass widow whom I expect to marry as soon as I land."

"Well," mused the inspector, rubbing his chin thoughtfully, "I guess you can take her through. Seems to me she will come under the classification of baled hay, and that is free."—Baltimore Record-Herald.

Not In His Line.

"What is his status in this community, if I may ask?"

"He ain't got none that I ever heard on. He run a grocery for awhile down to the Corners, but if he ever had any status there 'twan't kep' out in sight where anybody could see it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Rejected One.

"Let me see," remarks the ignorant personage. "Rime means frost, doesn't it?"

"Mine usually does," replied the unsuccessful poet absentmindedly.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

BOSTON POSTAL DISTRICT.
BRANCH OFFICE: LEXINGTON.
TELEPHONE, ARLINGTON, 301-2.

Entered at the Boston Postoffice as second class mail matter.

THURSDAY, JAN. 15, 1903.

The Enterprise has received several responsive answers to the invitation to contribute to the proposed symposium in the matter of increasing the number of members of the board of selectmen and abolishing the several commissions and committees, but all too late for publication this week.

METROPOLITAN PARK.

Arlington has not reaped much benefit from the Metropolitan system of parks, although it has contributed over $14,000 for taxes. As Gov. Bates is supposed to be favorable to completing the system of parks whereby the whole system will be connected, the Legislature will vote the necessary money this winter, and Arlington together with other suburban towns and cities are to be brought into the full use of the system by the long delayed boulevards. It is not supposed any additional land will be taken but work on the connecting links between the reservations which are more important will be begun, which will put the great park system within easy reach of the people. The district has now paid the park assessment for three years, which covers Gov. Crane's objections, which were that the district must begin to pay assessments before entering upon any new expenditures.

AN ARLINGTON AUTHOR.

The current number of the Atlantic Monthly has a special interest for Arlington people. It contains the first part of "My Own Story" by John Townsend Trowbridge, the chapter being entitled "A Backwood's Boyhood."

Our neighbor and friend—everybody's neighbor and friend—came to this country, in the person of his first English ancestor Thomas Trowbridge about the year 1634. This pioneer of the family settled in Dorchester, bringing his wife and two sons with him. The Trowbridges are a Devonian family, and for three hundred years as tablets in two parish churches record, the name has been associated with benevolence. And it is likely that for three hundred years to come the memory of Thomas Trowbridge of Taunton, will be kept green by the yearly distribution of the legacy of his charity to the poor.

From a third son of Thomas Trowbridge, the immigrant, born in Dorchester, our genial and revered friend is descended. His father was born in Framingham, but went in early youth with his parents to Central New York. After his marriage he moved, for already the first pulsings of the westward tide were being felt to the Genesee valley. What is now Syracuse was then a frontier settlement, and one solitary house marked the site of the city of Rochester.

"ROLLING UP" A HOUSE.

In the midst of a small clearing in the woods, assisted by neighbors, the father of John T. Trowbridge proceeded to "roll up a house." It was a log-hut, with a puncheon floor of split chestnut logs, and the sleigh-boards served as the floor of the loft. "Not a nail was used in the construction; nails were expensive; wooden pegs took their place. No stones could be gathered on account of the deep snow, and my mother's kettles would sink down into the soft ground which formed the hearth." When the spring time came the good wife went out and found some good, nice stones to set her kettles on and felt rich!

A larger house succeeded this log-hut. The logs of this house were hewed on the inside and the chinks filled with clay. It had one large room twenty feet square, and a low-roofed chamber reached by a ladder above. In this house in September in 1827, John T. Trowbridge, the eighth child of his parents, first saw the light,—that of a tallow candle!

A TREAT IN STORE.

The story is fascinating, and we know how tantalizing it is to our readers that we should break off here. But we commend them to the narrative itself. Every paragraph is interesting. Mr. Trowbridge tells his own story with all that clearness and simplicity of diction which marks all his writings. The unvarnished and honest tale charms by its candor and impresses by its realism. It has all the beauty and accuracy of detail of a painting of a Dutch interior by a skilful master. Some passages are photographic in their luminous revealing of scenes and incidents, and all are suffused with the brightness and warmth of the author's personality. Every Arlington boy surely, and every American boy we hope, will read "My Own Story."

CONTROLLING THE OCTOPUS.

Senator Hoar's bill for regulating trusts is regarded by some as a severe if not drastic measure. Yet its principle is simply an application of the method by which banks and insurance companies are now regulated. A foreign corporation admitted to Massachusetts to do insurance business must agree to conduct its business according to State regulations, and admit the proper authority to examine its books, contracts, etc., at any time. Directors of banks are amenable to state laws, the breach of which may make them not only responsible for losses, but liable to criminal procedure.

What a sovereign state does in such cases it is now proposed the federal government shall do in regard to trading and manufacturing combinations, whose goods are articles of commerce between the states. Interstate commerce will be denied except on compliance with certain conditions, such as reports of capital, dividends, etc., and abstention from agreements to keep up prices. The breach of these required conditions will bring an injunction from the courts, and may carry with it fine or imprisonment of officers or directors, and individual liability of directors and managers for all debts of the corporation. The shield of secrecy is thus removed from the operations of the Trusts, and the business of corporations which enter into state commerce must be subject to examination by the Attorney General, just as the accounts of a national bank are always open to inspection by the controller of the currency.

Thus two forms of protection against monopoly and extortion are provided,—publicity, and the prohibition of arbitrary control of prices, regardless of values or of public necessity.

BENEFICENT TRUSTS.

Profit-sharing and retiring pensions are two most hopeful and encouraging features in the improving relations of employees and employer. We rejoice the more in these auspicious signs of a coming adjustment which shall be not only amicable but honorable.

Ten years ago the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads introduced the plan of pensions, provided in part by deductions from wages and in part by a premium on the profits of the corporation. Many, if not most of the great companies now make such provision, and the street railway companies of New York and Philadelphia have adopted the plan.

The United States Steel corporation (commonly called the Steel Trust) has introduced a plan of profit-sharing whereby a proportion of its profits is set aside according to a sliding scale,—one per cent when the profits are $80,000,000 and upwards, one and two-tenths when above $90,000,000, and so on. From the sum thus appropriated one-half is paid as a bonus to employees and the other half to buying preferred stock of the corporation, which pays eight per cent. To share these benefits, workmen must have been five years with the corporation. If for any cause they leave before the period is completed, the amount they have paid is returned. There are other details and some features of the plan are perhaps open to criticism, but we rejoice in the development of a better spirit, and the beginning of fairer and more fraternal relations between wealth and industry.

"ALCOHOL AS A RELISH."

Dr. Henry P. Bowditch, lecturing in the Lowell Institute course on problems in modern physiology, is reported to have said that alcohol is both a food and a relish. A relish was defined to be anything that favors the assimilation of food by a nervous impulse. Alcohol was thus classed with tea, coffee, pepper and clear soup! The classification strikes the layman as being a little too promiscuous to be scientific. Alcohol was moreover said to be a food, though thus classed with "things possessing practically no nutritive value," because it did, in certain quantities release potential energy.

Here, to us the lecturer seems a loose in logic as in dietetics. We fail to see how the release of potential energy is any more a process of nutrition than a nervous impulse. In some cases a glass of whiskey will give a man potential energy and nervous impulse to sing a convivial song. But the same dose of the same "relish" and "food" will energize and impel another man to beat his wife or shoot his best friend.

DOES THE RUM EVIL CURE ITSELF?

Dr. Bowditch further said (if correctly reported) that "true temperance reform is doubtless education in the proper use (of alcohol), or perhaps in a suggestion that obtains wide and respectable support that the rum evil cures itself by killing off the drunkards of the race!"

Unfortunately it kills off a good many more than the drunkards of the race, innocent and helpless victims,—wives, mothers and children of drunkards. And what makes the drunkards of the race?

The assumed value of alcohol as a medicine, which was urged, does not give us concern. Its necessity or value to "the worker arriving home at night with powers at a low ebb" when it will afford "a stimulation needed by the system" we entirely dispute. The wearied toiler does not need a stimulant, but rest and nourishment. You do not whip and spur the jaded horse when he returns to the stable.

No, no, doctor. Your plan of exterminating the rum evil by letting the drunkards exterminate themselves is bound to fail. It is as much lacking in philosophy as it is in philanthropy. And your plan of stimulation will certainly create a constant supply of drunkards from those who are seeking in liquor a nervous impulse and a release of potential energy.

But let us do Dr. Bowditch the justice of recording his testimony that "a very little alcohol indeed suffices at any time, and the healthy, the young, and the robust are barred altogether from its use."

A VANISHING WAR CLOUD.

The war-cloud in Venezuela seems to be dissolving, and very soon it is to be hoped the republic will rest under a bright and peaceful sky. President Castro has consented to a conference with the ambassadors of the allied powers, designating Minister Bowen, with the consent of the United States government to represent Venezuela. The Dolphin has been ordered from San Juan to Guayra to bring Mr. Bowen home with all speed, and the conference at Washington may, and we hope will render an appeal to the Hague tribunal unnecessary. A reasonable compromise is likely. The powers will probably waive the question of apology, and accept a small immediate payment in cash with an arrangement for the residue of their demand, which demand it is not wholly impossible they may be willing to reduce in order to obtain a settlement.

THE NEW ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

The Rt. Rev. Randall Thomas Davidson, bishop of Winchester since 1895, has been appointed Archbishop of Canterbury, in succession to the late Dr. Temple. Dr. Davidson is a Scotchman, and was born in Edinburgh, 1848. He is a graduate of Trinity College. For three years he was secretary and chaplain to Archbishop Tait, and in 1882-3 he was secretary to Archbishop Benson. He was a close friend of Queen Victoria, and served as her domestic chaplain. It is said he was offered the primacy upon the death of Dr. Benson, but the state of his health at that time compelled him to decline. He is the author of the Life of Archbishop Tait, in two volumes. This appointment as Archbishop of Canterbury is generally approved.

THE LATE ANGLICAN PRIMATE.

The demise of Dr. Temple, the late primate of the Anglican church, is as the fall of an oak in the forest. He was a noble and conspicuous figure, and his removal leaves a large void. In his last days he was as absolutely trusted as he was universally revered. Yet in 1860, when he wrote a paper in "Essays and Reviews" he was denounced as a heretic, being styled with his collaborators, one of "the seven extinguishers of the seven lamps of the Apocalypse." Eleven thousand persons headed by Dr. Pusey demanded degradation if not excommunication for the seven essayists. The views which created so much excitement are now freely held and discussed without disturbing the tranquility or imperilling the faith of any soul.

THAT BOSTON & MAINE COKE.

The Boston & Maine Railroad has in various places been supplying their employees with coke at very reasonable prices. The local employees recently came in for a share of this liberality on the part of the road as was announced in these columns. The Enterprise knowing that the business of distributing the coke and collecting was through the office of Mr. Frederick C. Morrow the local agent, assumed that it was through his efforts that the coke was obtained and so heedlessly published the fact. Since then the Enterprise has learned that it has been a common practice in many places and required little effort whatever. However a certain employee has protested against our placing credit where it does not belong, and we would state that we have no desire to give Mr. Morrow any credit he does not deserve, neither does he desire it or moreover need it.

We understand from the employee who protests that each made application for his own supply. Mr. John Ewart being the first to ask. Mr. Morrow was simply responsible to the company for the coke until the company got the money.

THE NEW SCHOOL HOUSE.

As it appears that the recent vote of the town to build a new school house was for certain technical reasons illegal and, that nothing can be done upon the same without another vote of the town, which quite probably will be at the March meeting, there has been put in circulation a petition to the school committee requesting them to use their influence in securing a vote of the town to build an eight room building instead of a four room building as was voted at the town meeting which vote now appears to be illegal.

There are many who believe it would be expedient and the better policy for the town to erect a larger building for future accommodation of the pupils when the additional cost would be comparatively small, while another element contend that the system of restricting that has been obtained by the School Committee is adequate to all demands. The opportunity that is afforded before the matter will again come before the town ought to give ample time for consideration and the next vote should be the popular expression of the town, and final.

MR. HIGGINS RESIGNS.

The resignation of Cashier William D. Higgins of the First National Bank, came as a great surprise to everyone. Mr. Higgins has been with the bank since its organization in November, 1891, in the capacity of both director and cashier, and in fact, it is almost entirely due to him that the bank was started. He it was who came to Arlington and interested Mr. E. Nelson Blake (who has been the president since the organization) and other influential citizens in the forming of a National bank in this town. The growth and excellent results of the bank are to a large extent to be credited to Mr. Higgins and in his retirement Arlington people will miss an accommodating and popular man.

The resignation was accepted by the board of directors, to take effect on the selection of a successor. In their letter of acceptance they expressed their appreciation of the faithful and efficient services of the retiring official, and their regret at his feeling obliged to resign. It is understood that Mr. Higgins will devote his time to the insurance business, in which he has been more or less interested for a number of years.

G. A. R.

The following officers of Francis Gould Post, G. A. R., were installed Thursday evening, by Past Commander George W. Wright of George G. Meade Post of Lexington, as installing officer, assisted by Past Commander C. G. Kauffman, also of George G. Meade Post, as officer-of-the-day:

Commander, Jacob O. Winchester; senior vice-commander, Alexander H. Seaver; junior vice-commander, Henry Bradley; quartermaster, Sylvester C. Frost; adjutant Leander D. Bradley; chaplain, W. A. P. Willard; surgeon, David Cheney; officer-of-the-day, James A. Marden; officer-of-the-guard, H. W. Berthrong; quartermaster sergt., R. A. Knight.

At the close of the installation addresses were made, a clamor served and with music, a social hour enjoyed. There was a good sized attendance and the exercises of great interest.

BURGULARS IDENTIFIED.

The store of N. T. Neilson on Massachusetts avenue, at corner of Henderson street, was entered by burglars on Wednesday night of last week and late Thursday night the police arrested Peter Gallagher and James Milligan of Arlington, and in the third district court at Cambridge Friday morning, they were identified by Charles A. Barnes, who lives next door to the store, and who saw them leave it. They were held in $200 each for the grand jury.

AMONG THE BOWLERS.

In the Gilt Edge league, Arlington Boat Club is solid in last place, Commercial and Charlestown are tied for first position, with Newtowne in second. The individual leader is Hales of Newtowne. Rugg of A. B. C. is eighth, Durgin ninth and Dodge fourteenth. Last week Commercial took three straight from A. B. C., in a well rolled match, the lead in the first and third games being by only nineteen and twelve pins, although in the second by 123.

In the Mystic Valley series Towanda succeeded in overhauling Kernwood and tied with her for first place. Arlington Boat Club is tied with Calumet for second position, while Charlestown has third to itself. In the individual standing A. S. Littlefield of Calumet, still holds first place, with Orne of Kernwood close behind.

Last week Arlington took two out of three from Newtowne, the figures being low.

The games for A. B. C. this week are: Wednesday at B. A. A. in the Gilt Edge, and Thursday, Medford at Arlington, in the Mystic Valley series.

LEXINGTON.

L. F. Perkins of the Leslie, paid a visit to Watertown friends last Sunday.

Mrs. Mason has returned to the home of Charles F. Smith on Bedford street, and will remain with that family for the winter.

Mrs. Schofield of Bedford street, who has had a severe attack of the grip, has almost entirely recovered and will soon be about.

Charles F. Smith and George F. Smith have been appointed executors of the will of the late Olive Smith.

Mrs. Eden B. Lane has rented apartments on Hancock street near the Hancock-Clark house.

The annual meeting of the Baptist Corporation will be held in the church parlors on Saturday evening, Jan. 17.

The Lexington Literary Union will hold a social at the Old Belfry club Thursday evening, at which a smart program is promised the guests.

Chief of Police Franks has added a storm door to his residence on Waltham street, and finds it a comfortable, and profitable improvement.

Miss Annie Muzzey, who has been spending the holidays with Lexington friends, has returned to New York, where she is connected with the Horace Mann Library.

The Republican town committee have elected the following officers: Chairman, Arthur D. Stone; vice-chairman, Wm. L. Burrill; secretary, Geo. S. Teague; treasurer, George E. Smith.

Mrs. Jacobs hens continue to belong to the market, and as that famous humorist "Mark Twain" reads the Enterprise each week, an order can be expected from him at any time for a car load of eggs to burn.

Lexington is probably paying as much for coal as any town in this vicinity. A half a ton delivered at North Lexington Monday afternoon, cost the purchaser $6.63, and the man who purchased it followed the man who delivered it, right to his door in a sleigh.

The stone crusher on Middle street, owned by Frank Kendall, but used by the town was damaged during the storm of a week ago, and Monday a machinist was at work getting it in condition for use in the early spring.

George W. Sampson while going to his cellar Monday morning to look after the furnace, stepped upon a nail, and received a wound in his foot that will keep him from his office for a few days.

Guests at the Leslie the past week were August Voigt of Conn., F. M. Sears of East Brunswick Me., L. M. Dennis of W. Barnstable, E. Whitcomb of Springfield, J. A. Merrill of Newport, Me., and E. H. Robinson of Reading.

Hunt's new block on Massachusetts Avenue, is only to be two stories instead of four; the roof of the top story is now being boarded in, and it is hoped to have the stores ready for occupancy by April 1. Moakley the druggist, will occupy the corner store.

Lexington pedestrians are travelling in good luck these wintry days, when the sidewalks are covered with a thin coat of ice, as the street department, early had men at work placing sand on the most used portions, a luxury denied some of its neighbors.

Lexington Council K. of C., will attend a meeting of Concord Council next Thursday evening, when the third degree will be worked. The members have chartered a special car for the occasion, and a large number of members have signified their intention to attend.

The owners of fast horses have been making the best possible use of the good sleighing this week, and let their speedy ones out a bit. Among those noticed who held the ribbons over fast horses, were M. A. Pero, Col. Tower, Mr. Stackpole, of the Five Forks farm, Murry Smith of the Reservoir farm, E. A. Bailey, Mr. Payson of the Grasslands, Dr. Rolfe and Warren Batchelder.

Lexington people are much exercised at the sight of cars loaded with hard coal passing the Boston & Maine station each day for points beyond. They cannot understand why little one horse places like Bedford and Billerica can secure the black diamonds and Lexington people be obliged to content themselves with soft coal.

A sleigh owned and driven by S. J. M. Smith, capsized in front of Spaulding's store the on avenue, last Monday morning, and the horse a spirited one started to run. Mr. Murry however held on to the reins, and the accident was witnessed by Phillip Nelles of the steam fire engine, who quickly jumped at the horse's head and grabbed the bridle. The horse was stopped, the sleigh righted, and Mr. Murry started on his journey, none the worse for the mishap.

The fire department was summoned to the home of C. M. Tupper, last Sunday afternoon at 2.45, by an alarm from box 59, and the entire apparatus responded. Mr. Tupper's home is situated on the corner of Reed and Ward streets, and is quite a distance from the fire headquarters, but the firemen had the engines on the spot, with commendable promptness. The alarm was pulled in by Mr. Tupper himself, and the fire was found to be located in the chimney. It was quickly extinguished, and the damage was very slight, being caused mostly by water. One of the first men on the spot was special officer Wheeler, but his services were not needed.

LEXINGTON

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. O. Whiting will start for the south, next Tuesday, and will be absent about three weeks.

B. F. Brown and wife left town Tuesday for an extended winter trip to the West India Islands. Before returning Mr. and Mrs. Brown will visit Havana, Jamaica, and the island of Martinique. They will not return until the winter months are gone.

Lexington has secured the services of Miss Alice Bigelow, as a teacher in the High school. She is a resident of Lexington and a graduate of Radcliffe, and will teach Latin and French in her new position.

The Historical society met Tuesday evening at the Hancock Clark house, and listened to a very interesting paper on Massachusetts in the Colonial Period. The paper was read by Rev. C. A. Staples, and claimed the attention of those present during the reading, and the attendance was very good.

EAST LEXINGTON.

John Barnes of Massachusetts avenue, cut his foot Saturday while chopping wood.

Howard Munroe of Lowell street has engaged a number of men to chop down trees.

Cornelius Donovan of Fern street, who has been ill the past week, is able to be about again.

The Adams school has just received a supply of coal, which will probably last another month.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Harrington will celebrate the tenth anniversary of their marriage next Monday evening.

We are sorry to hear that Dr. Alderman's horse ran away in Arlington, and the doctor was thrown out of his sleigh.

Special Officer Wheeler was a visitor at the East Lexington fire headquarters last week, and enjoyed a game of pool.

The Fern street coast is one of the best in town and safest in any town about here. It is crowded day and night.

Postmaster Austin laughs at the coal barons and the cold weather these days, by throwing huge pieces of wood into a large stove.

Wallace Teale organized a most pleasant sleigh party Tuesday night, which made the welkin ring in Arlington, Medford and Woburn.

The school committee are considering the sanitary condition of the Adams school, and feel that it needs to be improved. It is probable that at the next town meeting, an appropriation will be asked for this purpose.

At the last meeting of Adams Chemical and Hose 1, the following officers were elected: Captain, C. H. Spaulding; 1st Lieut., I. Palmer; 2d Lieut., J. Johnson; clerk and treasurer, H. M. Torrey.

The annual dance of the East Lexington fire department will be held Thursday eve, Jan. 15. The floor will be in charge of Captain Spaulding, assisted by J. H. Wright I. Palmer, J. Johnson. A concert will be given from 8 to 9.

Miss Gertrude Ball of East Lexington, wore a dotted tulle dress trimmed with lace, at the reception of Miss Elsie Bird, at the Somerset last Thursday. The reception was one of the most brilliant of the New Year, and Miss Ball was one of the young people selected to pour tea.

At the last meeting of the trustees of the Cary Library, Rev. L. D. Cochrane, and Francis J. Garrison, were appointed a sub-committee to purchase books, for the East Lexington branch, out of the income from the Wellington fund. The income amounts to sixty-two dollars, and while not large, the people can rest assured that the books purchased will be the best to be procured for the money expended.

THE FOLLEN CHURCH.

The Follen church Guild met last Friday evening, and voted to take charge of the music of the church, and to engage the organist hereafter.

The following committee was appointed to have charge of music for the year.

Miss Anna Lawrence, Miss Alice Locke, Miss Florence Kauffmann, Charles Johnson, and George Foster.

The committee will meet Friday evening after choir practice to perfect arrangements. The pastor preached last Sunday morning on "Our Father," taking for his text the open words of the Lord's Prayer.

The subject of next Sunday's sermon will be "Reverence."

The meeting of the Guild will be held at 7 o'clock Sunday evening, when the pastor will take for his subject, "The Message of Christ to the 20th Century."

So far services in the church have not been interfered with for want of coal.

The officers of Bethel Lodge, I. O. O. F. were installed last evening.

Menotomy Council Royal Arcanum will have installation of officers next Tuesday evening.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS:

The Woman's Relief Corps held its annual installation of officers, Thursday afternoon January 8, in G. A. R. hall. Mrs. Mary E. Gilman, Past Department President of Roxbury, was installing officer and Mrs. Carrie Ryan installing conductor. The following officers were installed.

Mrs. Carrie M. Fowle, President; Mrs. Gertrude McNeal, Senior Vice Pres. Mrs. Nellie M. Farmer, Junior Vice Pres. Mrs. John Ewart, Chaplain; Mrs. George Jacobs, Conductor; Mrs. Mary L. Durgan, Assistant Conductor; Mrs. Jennie Barnes, Guard; Miss Louise M. Record, Assistant Guard; Mrs. Alice Knowlton, Secretary; Mrs. Burnett, Treasurer; Mrs. Ella Doane, Mrs. Nellie M. Marden, Mrs. Bessie Cahill, Miss Annette Frizelle, color bearers.

Bouquets were presented to Mrs. Gilman and Mrs. Ryan. The retiring president Mrs. Clara Kimball was given a handsome gold chateleine watch, and the retiring treasurer Mrs. Sarah Blanchard who has served the post in that capacity for many years, was presented with a wrist bag containing $25. The executive committee served lunch in the banquet hall.

ARLINGTON.

Representative Stone of Lexington who represents this district, has been appointed on the judiciary committee for the coming session of the legislature.

Miss Grace Lennett, who has been seriously ill all through her vacation at her parent's home on Mt. Vernon street, was so far recovered as to be able to return to her school duties in Claremont, N. H., on Saturday last.

Clarence Wetherbee of the firm of Wetherbee Bros., will leave Monday for a brief trip to New York. The automobile exposition at Madison square garden being the chief attraction.

There will be another inspiring service in the main Auditorium of the Baptist church on Sunday evening at 7.30 o'clock. Rev. Charles W. Briggs, a missionary in the Philippine Islands since our occupation, will deliver the address, telling a thrilling story of the conditions and people there, with a most interesting delineation of their characteristics as a race. All are cordially invited. Large chorus choir, and praise service with rousing hymns.

The entertainment and supper at the Pleasant Street Congregational church last Tuesday evening was well attended and a very enjoyable affair. There was an entertainment by the Arlington Choral Club. Miss Grace Lockhart, leader, and Miss Velie Lockhart, accompanist which was greatly enjoyed. The solos by Miss Lockhart, the readings by Miss Horv of Wellington, Ohio, and the violin solos by Miss Helene Johnson were all highly appreciated.

The Loyal Temperance Legion elected its officers for the ensuing quarter, last Monday: President, Harold Needham; vice-president, Dolly Bond; past president, Clifford Tyner; chaplain, George Chapman; secretary, Chester White; assistant secretary, Ruth Belyea; treasurer, Florence Beers; ushers, Leslie Howard, Ellis Reid; guards, Lawrence Cloyd, Paul Storer.

At a recent meeting of the Arlington Branch of the Hospital Aid Society, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, John A. Bishop; secretary, Catherine E. O'Brien; treasurer, John R. Hendricks. The reports of the officers showed that the past year had been a successful one financially, and also that there had been either a consumptive or a cancer patient from this town in the hospital almost the entire year. For the benefit of the hospital it was decided to present "A Fisherman's Luck" in the Town hall, Thursday evening, Jan. 22, and the branch solicits the patronage of the people of the town so that this entertainment may be a success, and that they may continue the good work of caring for the incurable sick of the town.

NO CAUSE TO COMPLAIN.

It is quite often the case that reporters, who are human beings after all, get accounts of happenings somewhat mixed. It is also a fact that reporters quite often get hold of news that they suppress, for the sole purpose of saving a good name from notoriety. But when a reporter will go so far as to seek information in regard to a fact, which is in the hands of the public at the time, for the sole purpose of presenting it in its true light, he certainly deserves to be received in the same spirit. People who have an opportunity to give the public proper facts, or even to suppress news, by common courtesy to a reporter, must not complain, after the opportunity has been offered to them, and unceremoniously declined, if the facts, unimportant ones at that are presented in garbled form.

BRIEF HISTORY

OF REPRESENTATIVE BUSINESS FIRMS OF ARLINGTON AND LEXINGTON.

No. 5.

N. J. HARDY,

Baker and Caterer, 657 Massachusetts Avenue, Arlington.

The high-class bakery and catering establishment of Mr. N. J. Hardy is too widely known to require an extended notice at our hands. The house receives an extensive patronage not only in Arlington but throughout this section of the county, and is famous for the superior quality of its products. A speciality is made of fancy pastry, wedding cake, etc., and the bakery is headquarters for unsurpassed baked beans. Catering for parties, weddings and all social events is attended to in the most careful and fashionable manner. At the salesroom, 657 Massachusetts avenue, three lady clerks are employed. In the bakery twelve experienced men are employed, and it requires twelve teams to deliver orders. In a word, Mr. Hardy's bakery is one of the best equipped and most modern in operation in the State, including the city of Boston. It is a matter of historical interest that the present business is the outcome of a bake-house established in the early part of the 18th century in what is known as the old Menotomy Hall. It was the meeting place of old societies.

FISKE BROS., LEXINGTON.

Boots and Shoes, Also Bicycles, Sundries, etc.

Two brothers who are rapidly forging to the front are John and Joseph H. Fiske, the well-known boot and shoe men of Lexington. The former for a time was engaged in a grocery store, while the latter made his first start in stationery. In 1893, after John T. Fiske has started the business, they joined hands in a boot and shoe store, and their success may be evinced by the fact that their trade has trebled in nine years. They carry a full stock of bicycles, and it is the only automobile depot in town. John, the elder of the two, conducts a bicycle business in Waltham and resides there. He is a member of the Monitor Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and Prospect Lodge, I. O. O. F. Joseph Fiske looks after the Lexington store and is agent for the Orient and Thomas motor cycle. He is a member of Simon W. Robinson lodge of Free Masons, and resides with his parents on East street. The members of this firm are descended from good American stock, being descendants of Dr. Joseph Fiske, who was a surgeon in the Revolutionary War. Though they are not active in town politics they are strong Republicans.

A. O. SPRAGUE.

Restaurant, Confections, Etc., 5 and 7 Mystic Street, Lexington.

When the "inner man" is to be satisfied—and that should be at least three times a day a capital place is the restaurant of A. O. Sprague, 5 Mystic street. If there is one profession above all others that needs experience it is that of a restaurateur, and Mr. and Mrs. Sprague have that experience. It is wonderful how much one can get for a little money, and to prove it try one of the dinners gotten up at Sprague's. Lunches can be obtained here from five cents to a square meal at a quarter, and as the place has such a clean looking appearance, one's appetite is apt to be voracious. A full line of tonics is kept on hand. A choice line of candies, peanuts, fruit, etc., together with the favorite brands of tobacco, cigars, and pipes are always in stock. Mr. Sprague was born in Appleton, Me., and for thirty years lived in Stoneham. He has been doing business here since the fall of 1900, and patronage has greatly increased since that date. Mr. and Mrs. Sprague reside at 15 Mystic street.

HERBERT V. SMITH.

General Store, Massachusetts Avenue, Lexington.

It would be difficult to ask for any article but what is in stock at the store of Herbert V. Smith of Massachusetts avenue. His store is a departmental one in every sense of the word, but he lays no pretensions to it being a Jordan's or a White's. What strikes one forcibly is the splendid assortment of periodicals, novels, newspapers, etc. A line of choice cigars, tobacco, etc., can always be obtained for the asking, provided, of course, the cash is forthcoming. A man can obtain a thorough outfit of gents' furnishings, and as to boots and shoes he has all makes. Mr. Smith has only been established one year, but his trade is increasing week by week. For eighteen years he farmed at Lexington, but concluded he would go into business. He was born in Brighton forty-six years ago and there attended the public schools. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum and Old Belfrey club. Mr. Smith is married and resides in Lexington.

The user of little space is apt to waste more of his advertising appropriation than the one who uses too much.—American Druggist.

When you economize it isn't good business to advertise it by cutting your advertising.—Nath'l C. Fowler, Jr., Boston.

EUROPE BY CYCLE.
London, England.
Sept. 14, 1902.
Dear Friends:—Since I wrote No. IX at Coblenz, Germany, we have traveled 304 miles by wheel to the Hook of Holland, passing through Cologne and Amsterdam. Thursday night we crossed the English Channel from the Hook of Holland to Harwich, whence a ride of 70 miles on the cars brought us into London about 8 o'clock Friday morning. It seemed the next best thing to getting home to arrive in a land where our own language is spoken, and for the first time we haven't had to go hunting a place to stay, a card sent ahead having provided a welcome at our old lodgings.

After getting our call at Coblenz we got started for Cologne at about 8.30 and rode in a thick fog for an hour or two with nothing to indicate that we were following the Rhine, we being at some distance from it. Later in the forenoon, however, we got lovely views of the river and more castles. Diogenes occasionally read from the guide book a poem or legend connected with some castle. About 12 we stopped at a garden restaurant and ordered dinner, which was brought on in such a leisurely manner that we consumed an hour and a half over it. It was a typical German dinner, consisting of soup, two kinds of meat, potatoes, cauliflower, and a light dessert consisting of a few very hard pears which we chewed contentedly when told by our host that they were a variety that were soft when they were hard or something to that effect. This was a red-letter day because in the afternoon we ran across a seller of "Gefrorenes" (ice cream), but he had barely enough left to give us each one 2-cent serving and part of another. He had been doing a rushing business because it was some kind of a holiday and we found all the small towns gaily bedecked with flags, while there were plenty of merry-go-rounds, candy stands and other devices for separating people from their money.

We reached Cologne (55 miles) about 5 and wheeled through the city at once to the Cathedral, which we found beautiful beyond our expectations, without and within. We were just too late to climb the tower, the highest in the world. When Aristotle and I tried to join Diogenes at a store on Hohestrasse (High St.) we not only were not allowed to ride through the street, but were even forbidden to walk through with our wheels. So I left my companion in charge of the wheels in the square near the Cathedral and went after the other man who joined us with his wheel after going around by back streets. The street was thronged with people much like Winter St., Boston, when filled with shoppers, and there were beautiful stores on each side of the street. The laws about wheels are very strict in German cities. Cyclists must ride single file and in many streets have to dismount and walk.

It was now about dark, but we decided to wheel out a little way and put up at some country "Gasthaus." For once, however, we had "reckoned without our host," for the country was full of pilgrims to a certain town which next day we passed through and we found everything full. We rode on for an hour or two applying at every hotel and at some private houses that we thought were hotels owing to the darkness, until we began to think we should have to do from necessity what we had often talked of for adventure, viz., sleep under a hay stack. Hunger led us to persevere, however, and about 10 o'clock we succeeded in finding one room where we spent the night, two in a bed and one on the floor. It is needless to say that supper tasted good that night.

The next morning we pushed on past Dusseldorf towards Arnheim. At the little town where we got dinner the street was lined with many kinds of booths for the sale of candy, etc., in honor of the pilgrims passing through. While strolling about after dinner Aristotle and I bought a long stick of candy for a few pfennigs which we broke into small pieces and gave to the children. From this bit of rashness we were in a few minutes surrounded by a hundred or more boys and girls. We then had great fun tossing small candies wrapped in paper into the crowd, the wooden shoes of the children making a great clatter as they scrambled for the candy. Aristotle gave away a few U. S. postage stamps from his old letters and he was soon the centre of attraction. The only way to escape the crowd was to return to the hotel, where the host was much amused at our following.

After spending the night at a small town on the border we entered Holland Wednesday morning and wheeled through Utrecht to Amsterdam. In Holland we rode about 150 miles over brick pavements, all their roads being of this description. Some of the way we found smooth side-paths but on the whole cycling in Holland is rather bumpy.

Amsterdam is a very interesting place, intersected with many canals. I visited the palace where Queen Wilhelmina spends a week every April and was charmed with its beauty. Thursday, being delayed by repairs on Aristotle's tire, it was nearly 12 before we left the city in a light rain. We got dinner at Haarlem and then kept on to Leliden, the resort of the Pilgrims after fleeing from England. We were now about 22 miles from the Hook of Holland, whence we were to sail to England and it was after 6 o'clock, but as the boat did not sail till 11.30 we pushed on with good courage. Entering The Hague after dark we had difficulty in inquiring the way of a man who had not a smattering of German, French or English, but spoke only Dutch, of which we were densely ignorant, but as good luck would have it an intelligent wheelman appeared who could speak a little English. He not only showed us our way through crowded streets and over many bridges but found a shop where we could get some Chinese lanterns and candles so as not to violate the law by riding without a light. At last he showed us a street where we could find our way by following a tram-line and took leave, loaded with our thanks and best wishes.

It was about 9 o'clock when we were on the way with a dozen miles or more between us and "The Hook," with our Chinese lanterns to light us through a cloudy night. To cap the climax Aristotle's tire began to leak so that it had to be inflated every few minutes. By going fast when we did ride we got to the dock at about 10.30 and were soon aboard the steamer, where we slept soundly till our arrival at Harwich, about 6 next morning (Friday). I was very much pleased with Holland and the people were especially friendly. We had great sport making our wants known. Some of the people knew a little German, some a little French, but most of them knew only Dutch. At the hotel where we stayed in Amsterdam there was a waiter who knew a little English. People work hard in these European countries. In Holland I saw a man wearing a kind of harness and dragging a canal boat weighing many tons and having several people on it. I think it was in Holland that I saw a woman dragging a cart containing a good sized calf. Dogs are used for dragging carts, sometimes harnessed two or three abreast and usually not very large. I saw some of these carts going at a rattling pace where it was down grade and a man or two riding. We passed a field where a lot of women were working elbow to elbow on their hands and knees picking up potatoes. There were 15 women and 2 boys, each taking a row, while two men were emptying their baskets into a wagon.

We reached London Friday morning about 8. After getting breakfast near the station we wheeled three miles in a light rain through very muddy streets to our lodgings, where we doffed our bicycle suits and revealed in white shirts and collars for the first time in four weeks. This seemed to heighten the effect of the tan on our faces which I think took on an extra coat of brown in the hot days just after leaving Switzerland.

We have now ridden over 2,000 miles on our trip and have about 200 more to get to Liverpool. We shall start Tuesday morning, going by way of Winsor, Oxford, Stratford and Chester and get there Friday night. On Saturday, the 20th, we shall board the Devonian of the Leyland line and ought to get to Boston by the 30th. This will be the last long letter, for the rest of the trip can be more easily described orally.

On the continent we rode 1,350 miles on our wheels, about a hundred on a Rhine boat and none on the cars. We traveled in 4 different countries, used 4 different monies and ran up against 3 foreign languages with more or less success. We have learned and admired the good traits of Frenchman, Swiss, German and Dutchman. We have recognized points in which these countries excel us, but through it all we are more and more proud of the country whose colors we have carried in our pockets and waved on many occasions, gaining enthusiastic responses from people on mountain railways, Rhine boats and other places.

Yours,
X. Y. Z.

"BEAUTY AND THE BEAST" AT THE COLONIAL THEATRE.

Klaw & Erlanger's American production of the famous Drury Lane spectacular extravaganza, "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast," will be presented in New England for the first time at the Colonial Theatre in Boston, Monday evening, February 2nd. This piece was first seen on the stage at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, London, two years ago. It was pronounced by all the London critics the most magnificent spectacle ever presented at that house, where the greatest productions in all Europe are made. Klaw & Erlanger bought it for American presentation just after its London premier and first produced it at the Broadway Theatre in New York, November 4th, 1901, where it made the greatest success ever scored in the American Metropolis by a musical production, playing for thirty consecutive weeks to the largest receipts on record at this theatre.

Klaw & Erlanger imported all the scenery, costumes, armor, properties and effects used in its original presentation at Drury Lane, which comprise fifteen great scenes, over twelve hundred costumes and other paraphernalia sufficient to fill seventeen baggage cars 65 feet long. The original production entailed an outlay of over $100,000. An additional expense of $65,000 was paid by Klaw & Erlanger to import it to this country and place it on the American stage. Never content unless their productions represent the highest attainment of artistic excellence and brightness, they expended a large sum at opening of the present season in new costumes and scenic effects.

The advance sale of seats will begin a week ahead of the opening date, February 2nd. Seats may be ordered by mail, accompanied by remittances, letters to be directed to Mr. Isaac B. Rich, Manager, Colonial Theatre, Boston, Mass.

A PLATE OF SOUP.
Its Effect Upon General Scott's Presidential Aspirations.
Serving dinners in courses is comparatively a modern fashion, first introduced in diplomatic circles in Washington and imitated from France. Up to the date of President Polk's administration the course dinner among Americans had made no further progress than that of serving fish and soup separately. Soup was regarded as such a foreign frippery that a note written by General Winfield Scott, in which he explained that he was "just sitting down to a hasty plate of soup," covered him with such ridicule as to materially contribute to his defeat as a candidate of the presidency.

Soup in the early days of the republic was considered as food for invalids or poor people only. Later, when the social splendors of the court of the Empress Eugenie attracted rich Americans in flocks to Paris, French table manners and customs pushed the old English dinner fashions to the wall. It is doubtful, however, if soup ever found a place on the dinner table of the wealthy Maryland or Virginia planter, unless green turtle, which was really a stew, might be so called.

The object of an old time dinner party was to eat, whereas that of the course dinner is to delight the eye rather than the palate, and yet who will say that the sight of a well filled dinner table where an array of silver covered dishes gives forth a bouquet of appetizing odors fails to make an agreeable impression on all the senses?—Lippincott's Magazine.

Lost in Her Own Room.
"Talking about being lost," says the girl who has been visiting her grandparents in the old family homestead—"I have been lost in the city and lost in the country, but never was there anything so horrible as being lost in my own room. It was a very queer room I had at grandmamma's anyway—one of those rooms from which a flight of stairs leads down; rooms such as are only to be seen in old houses. It blew up cold the first night I was in the house, and I got up to close the window. The room, of course, was pitch dark. In getting back from the window to the bed I lost myself. I had not the slightest idea in what direction to turn, and I knew that if I was not careful I should go down those awful stairs. There was nothing to do but sit down on the floor and howl for some one to come and find me, and that was just what I did. If grandpa and grandmamma had not been unusually normal individuals, I should have frightened them to death. As it was, they only thought I had a nightmare, brought candles and located me and showed me my way to bed again."

The End of the World.
Dr. M. W. Meyer, a German scientist in an interesting volume under the above title explains a "new theory" as to how this event will probably come about. Indeed he carries his argument still further and finally extinguishes all the energy of the universe. All of the present satellites—moons, etc.—will eventually be drawn in by the force of gravitation and become a part of their planets. These in turn will be absorbed by the sun. A series of collisions will then commence between the various suns which will finally result in one enormous sun and solar system. "And so growing in grandeur, but diminishing in number, the final catastrophe will come when there are no more suns to produce collisions (and heat) and one huge body cooled to the zero of space, void of available energy, will mark the final outcome of cosmic motion."

Cotton and Flax.
Cotton was used for making garments in India at a date so remote that it cannot even be guessed at. The fact is mentioned by Aristotle. The first seeds were brought to this country in 1621. In 1686 the culture is mentioned in the records of South Carolina. In 1736 the culture was general along the eastern coast of Maryland, and in 1776 we heard of it as far north as Cape May. The use of flax for making clothing is nearly as ancient as that of cotton and perhaps more so, plants of soft and flexible fiber having been without doubt among the first vegetable productions of the ancient world and their practical value discovered soon after the invention of weaving.

Wind Shots.
Two striking instances of the effects of "wind shots," or the currents of air caused by the enemy's cannon balls, are given in the "Autobiography of Sir Henry Smith." On one occasion his horse fell as if stone dead, but he was not hurt at all. On another occasion an officer was "knocked down by the wind of a shot and his face as black as if he had been two hours in a pugilistic ring."

OVER AN UMBRELLA

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1902, by the
S. S. McClure Company

Mrs. Josiah Peabody, wife of Deacon Peabody of the village of Glenville, had a remarkable umbrella. It had witnessed the struggle for American independence and had taken many journeys by land and water. The ribs had been bent or stove in on numerous occasions and the handle broken and glued together half a dozen times. It had attended funerals, camp meetings, quilting bees, husking frolics and town meetings without number and at the age of 120 years was still doing business at the old stand and holding its own against all competition.

Mrs. Levi Cantwell, wife of Deacon Cantwell of the same village and living right across the way from Mrs. Peabody, was a remarkable woman, and what more natural than that a remarkable woman and a remarkable umbrella should adventure together? Mrs. Cantwell was remarkable in so much that she would never stir out of her house without an umbrella. She dreaded rain like a cat and, no matter how clear the day, was always looking for a sudden downpour. She had an umbrella of her own, and it was large enough to shelter her, but now and then she was forced to lend it or send it to the shop to be repaired.

The day she started to drive over to Rawsonville in the deacon's one horse wagon was one of the occasions when her umbrella was "not at home." It was a beautiful June morning, with no rain in sight for a week, but Mrs. Cantwell didn't propose to run any chances. After trying in vain at three or four houses she called upon Mrs. Peabody to lend her that remarkable old colonial.

Her request fairly stunned the owner of the sacred relic and was at first peremptorily refused, but after considerable discussion, remembering that Mrs. Cantwell had the reputation of being careful handed and tender hearted, Mrs. Peabody yielded.

"You know what store I set on it and what store the deacon sets on it," she said as she brought out the blue covered umbrella and dusted it off.

"I do," was the reply, "and you needn't worry one single bit. You must know what a careful woman I am when you remember that I've made one set of cups and sashers last me fourteen years."

Mrs. Cantwell might have driven away with the umbrella raised over her head, but as she needed both hands to manage the lines the deacon carefully stowed it away under the seat.

Arriving at Rawsonville, the old horse was hitched to a post in front of a store, and Mrs. Cantwell entered to do some "trading." She was an hour or so about it, and during this interval a stray cow came down the street hunting for something better than burdocks to eat. She found it when she looked over the tailboard of the wagon and espied the sacred umbrella. She had never seen the like of it before, and the taste was novel and palatable. The more she ate the more she wanted, and she never stopped until the last inch of cover had been swallowed and a vigorous but unsuccessful effort made to devour handle and ribs.

Mrs. Cantwell drove home without having looked under the seat and realized what a wreck accompanied her. It was only as she reached her own door and Mrs. Peabody came across the road that the tragedy was discovered. Excuses and apologies and offers to make repairs didn't go. With the wreck hugged to her bosom Mrs. Peabody retired to her own house, and good will to men flew out of the back door as she entered the front.

A quarrel over a broken flatiron may be confined to two neighbors, but a difference of opinion over a remarkable umbrella is a different thing. No one charged Mrs. Cantwell with deliberately bringing about the wreck, but she was blamed for not keeping one eye on hungry cows outside the store while she had the other on seven cent calico inside. She knew the associations and sentiments surrounding that relic, and sooner than submit it to peril she should have hired a boy to watch it. The pros and cons were discussed at every fireside in the village, and of course a feeling of bitterness was engendered. In less than a week neighbors who had always borrowed sugar and tea of each other were refusing to lend, and back gates were being nailed up.

Deacon Peabody was a good man. So was Deacon Cantwell. Together they had passed the contribution boxes in church and counted up the receipts after the sermon. They had worked out their road tax side by side and had stood elbow to elbow in temperance crusades and town improvements. That long friendship was now broken. After looking at the dilapidated umbrella for the fiftieth time Deacon Peabody had said to his neighbor:

"Deacon Cantwell, I never dunned a man in my life, but you owe me 50 cents."

"I do, and here it is," replied Deacon Cantwell, "and I'm free to say I think you are a mean man."

"I don't want any words with you."

"Nor I with you."

"You'll take your hogs out of my pasture!"

"And you'll keep your hogs out of my garden!"

The minister naturally heard of the rise and fall of the remarkable umbrella, and, although he refused to become an adherent of either side, he felt it his duty to touch upon the affair from his pulpit. He didn't mention the umrella by name, nor was he too hard upon the hungry cow. He didn't hint that Mrs. Cantwell was careless or Mrs. Peabody impetuous, and the meeting between the deacons was passed over entirely. He simply found a Biblical parallel and worked it up for the benefit of both sides, and the result almost wrecked the church. For the next three months there was more backbiting in the village than should have been heard of in ten counties, and there were no signs of a let up when incident stepped in to restore peace.

One day Deacon Peabody's wife went up into the garret to overhaul on old trunk. The place needed airing, and she raised a window. A hand organ was playing down the street, and she held up the sash with one hand and leaned out to see and to hear. Next thing she knew she was hanging head downward on the outside of the house, while the sash rested on her ankles and held her fast.

Deacon Cantwell's wife was sewing carpet rags in her sitting room when a series of shrieks lifted her out of her chair and propelled her to the front door. For a few seconds she was overcome by the sight opposite. Then she made a run for it, and two minutes later she was in the Peabody garret. Colonial umbrellas, hungry cows and the tongue of gossip were forgotten as she tugged and pulled at the hanging burden. When it was finally drawn back over the window sill, both women fainted away and tangled up with each other, and Silas Goodheart, who had heard the last shrieks and come running, stood over them with uplifted hands and said:

"Now let the heathen rage, for umbrellas is nowhar, and peace is restored to Glenville forevermore!"

Modern Manners.

Somebody has discovered that the decadence in modern manners does not necessarily denote our increased brutality or absolute indifference to the feelings and needs of other people. It is balm to the soul to be assured of this fact, says the Atlanta Journal.

We have admitted to ourselves for some time past that our manners have not the repose which should mark the caste of Vere de Vere and that we are indeed frankly discourteous to each other. We also know that many men are no longer particular how they act or what they say in the presence of women and do not even observe the small courtesies of life where members of the opposite sex are concerned. Men no longer hesitate to let a woman wait on them or to push her aside in a crowd or to smoke in her face unapologetically, as if that were their natural right. We certainly are less polished and ceremonious than were our forefathers.

Facing this fact, it is pleasing to be assured that the change is not due to selfishness, but is simply the expression of our desire to be honest, to avoid sham. Therefore if we sometimes overstep the limit and cultivate unpleasant freedom of speech and action manifest unrestrained rudeness, we are to be excused on the ground of our excessive frankness and honesty.

Tried to Improve His Name.

The old lady who admired her pastor because he said "Mesopotamia" so beautifully has been outdone by a Broadway office boy.

He was not pleased with the surname of Mulligan, to which he was condemned, and so when he applied for a new position in another office he decided to give himself a new name, and for this purpose borrowed what he thought was a name from the financial statements which he had to sort and file in the office in which he was last employed.

"What is your name?" inquired the clerk to whom he made application for work.

"William Recapitulation," replied the boy.

"That's a funny name," said the clerk after he had the boy repeat it several times.

"Don't you know General Recapitulation?" asked the boy in surprise.

"Never heard of him."

"Why, his name is in all Blank & Co.'s Wall street reports."—New York Times.

She Got Up a Blush.

A contributor to a Boston paper says that he always thought until recently that the blushing cheeks of a bride were a certain indication of either her embarrassment or her abounding health. He was disabused of this opinion by what he saw at a wedding the other day. The wedding party was in the vestibule, all ready to proceed to the altar, awaiting the wedding march. He noticed that the bride was very pale, and the bridesmaid noticed it about the same time and proceeded to take the bride's cheeks between her thumbs and fingers and give them a good, hard pinching. Under this process they soon showed a good color, whereupon the bridesmaid carefully performed the same operation on herself, and they proceeded with glowing cheeks to the altar.

Selling a Wife.

"To Be Sold.—For 5 shillings, my wife, Jane Heeband. She is stoutly built, stands firm and is sound, wind and limb."

"She can sow and reap, hold a plow and drive a team and would answer any stout, able man that can hold a tight rein, for she is hard mouthed and headstrong, but if properly managed would either lead or drive as tame as a rabbit."

"Her husband parts with her because she is too much for him. Inquire of the printer."

"N. B.—All her clothes will be given with her."

The foregoing is an advertisement of over a century ago and was first published in Virginia.

Woman's Column

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S TACT.

Mrs. Roosevelt has demonstrated in a genuine fashion that there is not a bit of snobbishness in "the first lady of the land." At a recent White House reception, after a number of distinguished guests had been received by Mrs. Roosevelt, a woman, beautifully gowned and conducting herself with an air of distinction, was presented.

After customary formalities the guest passed on to join a group of women whose husbands were in the official set. A frigid nod from one and a haughty reply from another made it all too plain that she was unwelcome, for some one had recognized her as a former saleswoman in a large New York department store.

With consummate grace she withdrew from the circle and was about to leave the parlor when Mrs. Roosevelt, with her characteristic tact and discernment, stepped to her side, and extending her hand, said:

"I think we hardly need to be introduced as we are such old friends. I am glad to meet you here."

And placing an arm around the waist of the young woman who had so often supplied her wants at the New York store, Mrs. Roosevelt led her to a sofa and chatted with her for 15 or 20 minutes in the charming manner which is inherent in the wife of the president of the United States, and which has endeared her to every American woman.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

Wash day is the bete noir of many a household. There is really no reason why it should be. The results of the day make everyone sweeter, neater and cleaner. Here are a few suggestions that will make the day easier and happier.

Fine clothes need no rubbing. They should first be wrung out of cold water and then boiled fifteen minutes in water in which plenty of soap has been dissolved. Two rinsings should make them pure and white.

Clothes look better from which the water is dripping when hung upon the line than those which have been tightly wrung.

When clothes are very soiled the spots should be rubbed with a fibre bristle brush.

An excellent washing fluid is made by adding to the water in the boiler one tablespoonful of spirits of turpentine and one tablespoonful of ammonia.

In washing curtains put them in the tub and wet them with coal oil. Then pour hot suds upon them. They should be drawn many times through the fingers to strip them of dirt and then rinsed twice.

Ginghams soaked in salt water will not fade.

Shk handkerchiefs should be washed alone in lukewarm water and rinsed three times in cold water. Then blue them and iron them before they are dry.

Dainty dollies, tray cloths and centrepieces should be washed with castile soap. Always iron them on the wrong side.

CHOCOLATE CAKE.

- 1/2 cup butter.
- 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar.
- 2 cups flour.
- 1 tbs. cornstarch.
- 2 tsp. baking powder.
- 3 eggs.
- 1/2 cup milk.
- 1 tsp. vanilla.

Put two squares of chocolate (broken), three extra tablespoonfuls sugar, and two tablespoonfuls milk into a saucepan and melt it over the teakettle till smooth, then cool slightly before adding it to the cake mixture. Cream the butter, add gradually the sugar, the egg yolks beaten light, then the chocolate paste, then the milk and flour alternately, the cornstarch and baking powder having first been well mixed with the beaten whites last. Bake in shallow, long pans or in layers.

Frosting.

One cup granulated sugar, 1/3 cup of water, boiled together until it strings, then add slowly to the white of one egg beaten stiff, beating it all the time.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The management of the Castle Square theatre again shows a determination to afford the patrons of this playhouse an opportunity to become acquainted with the best examples of every class of dramatic attractions by securing "The Pride of Jennico" for production next week. This stage version of Edgerton Castle's novel of the same name enjoyed great favor two seasons ago, and the Castle Square company is to give the first performance in this city at popular prices.

"The Pride of Jennico" is announced for a single week, and the usual distribution of souvenir boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

It is a common question in speaking of a man who has made a success in business, "How did he build up such a business in so short a time?" A careful diagnosis of these cases leads to but one answer—judicious advertising.—C. J. Bailey, Boston.

Labor Column

Edited by Joseph E. Crandell.

The state lodge of machinists will hold their first convention in Worcester, next Sunday.

The tobacco trust is trying hard to have dealers refuse to handle union-made cigars and tobacco, but without success.

The executive board of the Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. of L., will meet in Wells Memorial hall, Boston, next Sunday.

The John F. O'Sullivan Fund now is $4145.61, and it is hoped this fund will reach $5000 before it closes.

A strike of mule spinners has been declared at the American Woolen Company's mill in Maynard. 2300 hands are involved, while the population is only 3100.

The State Board of Arbitration at Amesbury, trying to effect a settlement between the carriage and wagon builders and their employers.

Secretaries of the various labor organizations are requested to send to the editor of this column, notes of interest to the laboring class, reports of meetings, election of officers, etc.

At a meeting of the Waltham Central Labor Union, held last Wednesday evening, the semi-annual election of officers was held, a list of whom will appear in next week's paper.

The Lynn Co-operative Laundry, run by the Laundry Workers' Union, has moved its plant to more spacious quarters, owing to the pressure of business, the help are well paid, work short hours, and the prices for work are lower than those of the so called laundry trust.

The following officers were elected and installed at a meeting of Waltham Typographical Union, 259, held last Wednesday evening: President, Frank J. Ryan; vice-president, George A. Regan; financial secretary, A. L. Moody; recording secretary, W. F. Bryson; treasurer, Miss Agnes Morris. At the next meeting to be held February 2d, a banquet will be served.

General interest is manifested in this section over the strike now on at Montpelier, Vt., where the conductors and motormen of the Montpelier and Barre street railway struck yesterday for higher wages. The men demanded an increase from fourteen to twenty cents an hour and a ten hour day, with extra pay for overtime, and the strike is to enforce this demand.

Union men won't pay union rates for shaves, is the word that comes from the Worcester Bootblacks' Union, and the bootblacks are tired of organized labor that can not take its own medicine and goes for cut-rate polish. This is certainly a case for the Worcester C. L. U. to investigate, when members of its affiliated unions patronize non-union bootblacks.

The organization of the New England District Lodge of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders was completed last week. Delegates were present from Boston, Providence, New Haven, Hartford, Lowell, Springfield, Lawrence, Cambridge, Fitchburg, Norwood, Bath, Me., and Groton, Conn. John J. Morton of East Boston was elected organizer for New England, and a vigorous campaign of organization will be started.

At a largely attended meeting of Coal Teamsters' and Helpers' Union, 328, of Waltham, Watertown and Newton, held Thursday evening, Jan. 1, the following officers were elected: President, Thomas Bannon; vice-president, John Nally; secretary-treasurer, Peter Cain; recording secretary, Patrick Hughes; warden, John Barrett; conductor, Angus Robiechud; and three delegates to the Waltham Central Labor Union were also elected. Three new members were admitted, and the union is in a very prosperous condition.

At a meeting of colored people held in Faneuil hall, Boston, January 1, one of the resolutions adopted was so erroneous as to deserve public correction. In the formation of a labor union, there is no distinction as to race, creed, or political belief, and in justice to mine workers, at whom the resolution was aimed, a colored man is as much entitled to the benefits derived from organized labor as a white man, so long as he lives up to his obligations.

The regular meeting of Watertown Carpenters' Union, 1102, was held last Wednesday evening. At the meeting the following officers were installed: President, J. R. Logan; recording secretary, C. F. Collett; financial secretary, Gus Lundstrom; treasurer, C. F. Davenport; warden, George E. Dower; conductor, A. McEachers. Brief addresses were made during the evening by W. S. Shields, state organizer for the carpenters; D. H. Reegan, president of the Boston building trades' council, and J. E. Potts, business agent of the Boston carpenters' district council.

The Central Labor Union of Boston, the strongest labor organization in New England, at a meeting held last Sunday, adopted resolutions calling upon the city to erect and operate its own electric light plant. The chief stand for such a measure was caused by the fact that the city at present pays too high a price for its electric lighting. The committee on establishment of a co-operative coal yard was unable to report, but will make a full report of their investigation at the next meeting. The committee stated, however, that it believed co-operative fuel yards would eventually be established in all parts of the country by trades' unions. The union adopted resolutions that the campaign for direct legislation be extended to Congress, and the committee in charge of the matter, was instructed to appeal to all labor organizations for co-operation and assistance in bringing the vital subject to the attention of the members of Congress.

An Ancient Bible.
In the Cottonian library in England is an old manuscript copy of a part of the Bible in Latin. The London Chronicle says it was used at the coronations of English sovereigns 300 years before the "stone of destiny" was brought from Scone to Westminster by Edward I.

If this be true, the use of this Bible for the purpose dates back to the year 1000. It is a quarto of 217 leaves, containing the four gospels, and seems from the style of the writing and illuminations, which are very beautiful, to have been made about the end of the ninth century.

It narrowly escaped destruction in the fire at Ashburnham House in 1731, of which it bears evidence in its crumpled leaves and singed margins. There is some evidence that the son of Edward the Elder, Athelstan the Glorious, who was king of the West Saxons from 925 to 940, owned this Bible and gave it to the church of Dover.

Bats and Vampires.

At sunset in the forest of Guiana the bats fit from their hiding places, some taking the place of the parrots and flocking around the fruit trees, while the horrid vampires wander far and near in search of some sleeping animal, or even man, in order to obtain a meal. Cows, goats, hogs, fowls as well as game birds and quadrupeds all suffer from their attacks if not secured in well latticed pens, while the traveler must not be surprised when awaking to find blood oozing from a wound in his foot or temple.

In some places domestic animals cannot be kept at all, as they are so weakened by repeated attacks as to ultimately die of exhaustion. Fortunately, however, the vampires are not very common, and with proper care may be excluded from dwelling houses and stock pens.—Longman's Magazine.

Idea of Happiness.

Two young women, patently of the "saleslady" persuasion, rode down Chestnut street in a crowded trolley car on a recent morning. They chatted animatedly about the merits and demerits of Will and Gus till they reached Broad street. From there to Twelfth they preserved a dreamy silence. Then one broke out with:

"I say, Ag, what would you choose if you could have everything in the world you asked for?"

"Well," said Ag slowly and musingly. "I think I'd choose enough silk dresses to last me for the next ten years. What'd you take, Sade?"

"Me?" replied Sade. "It's the dream of me life, Ag, to have all the money I'd want, so I could go to me job in a cab every morning."—Philadelphia Times.

A BENEVOLENT OFFER.

WHICH IS OF GREAT INTEREST TO ALL SUFFERING WOMEN.

Mr. Editor:—I have learned of a very simple home treatment which is of interest to every suffering woman, as it will positively cure any case of leucorrhoea, painful periods, displacements or irregularities, and I would be pleased to have you inform your lady readers that I have decided to send it out free to all, as I feel it my duty to place it in the hands of every suffering woman. I had the pleasure of hearing from thousands of ladies in reply to my notice last year and I am now receiving many letters daily thanking me for the perfect health they have regained through my advice. I can refer almost any lady to some one in her locality who has been blessed by this treatment, and I hope all who are in need of such relief will write to me at once, for as I send the treatment free it will cost nothing to be convinced of its merits.

It should be in the hands of every suffering woman and all who wish the treatment should not delay, address at once,

MABEL E. RUSH,
Box 95, Joliet, Ill.

The publishers of this paper take pleasure in recommending that every woman who is in need of such treatment should avail herself of this offer at once, as certainly such a benevolent offer is worthy of attention.

LEXINGTON

LEXINGTON IS PROUD OF HIM.

The many friends of Representative Edward Carlton Stone of Lexington, predict a brilliant future for that popular young man.

Although serving his first term in the house he has been appointed to the "Joint Standing Committee in Judiciary," one of the most important in the Legislature.

This recognition of his ability, by the President of the Senate and speaker Myers, must be our excuse for placing before our readers a brief account of his life.

Representative Stone was born in Lexington in 1878, and is the product of our public schools. After graduating from the Lexington High School he studied law in the office of the late Hon. Selwyn C. Bowman, and afterwards took a course in Boston University law school, and is now connected with the office of Charles F. Choate in Boston.

While a student at Boston University law school he attracted the attention of the faculty, and when he was graduated, he was offered, and accepted the position of Instructor in Criminal Law, by that body.

He filled the position with entire satisfaction to the members of the faculty, until increasing business obliged him to resign.

The faculty not wishing to lose his services, as an instructor, created the "Department of Massachusetts Statutes" and invited Mr. Stone to accept the professorship. This he did and in addition to his other duties, he still finds time to devote to that duty.

Early in life he gave evidence of his capacity as a parliamentarian, and for a number of years, he has acted as moderator of our town meetings, presiding over assembly of voters with tact, and a fairness that commands the respect of the citizens.

Last year his friends decided that he was the proper man to represent them in Legislature, and urged him to accept the nomination.

The contest for the nomination, was one of the most exciting ever held in this town, the leaders in the party taking opposite sides, and exerting all their ingenuity to land a winner.

Good nature prevailed, but the caucus was characterized by the keenest efforts to bring out voters, and at its close Edward C. Stone to the delight of his friends received the honor.

His friends carried their enthusiasm to the polls, with the result that his majority was phenomenal, being 662, in the two towns in the district, out of a total vote of 1806.

His plurality in Lexington was the largest on record with one exception, that occasion being in 1896, when the late lamented President McKinley carried the town.

Mr. Stone is popular alike with both parties, and with his honors is a modest unassuming young man. He is easy to approach and possesses an open countenance, showing considerable force, and inspiring confidence.

Both Arlington and Lexington feel that they have got an able representative, who will look after their interests, and as the town of Lexington has voted to enter the "Metropolitan Water System" the voters have every confidence in Edward Carlton Stone.

LEXINGTON GOLF CLUB.

The Lexington Golf Club met at the home of E. C. Briggs last week, and elected the following committees for 1903. House Committee, Miss Ellen M. Tower, Miss E. Tyler, Mrs. Edwin Reed, George L. Gilmore and Jasper Whiting. Green Committee, N. W. Read, F. B. Taylor, Charles F. Carter, Charles Garrison, and F. F. Sherburne.

Delegates to the meeting of the Woman's Golf Association, which meets in Boston Jan. 21, Mrs. Edwin Reed and Miss Emily N. Lockwood.

The following were elected to membership in the club, Geo. D. Milne, N. E. Sargent, Miss Helen Tufts, Miss Clara H. Fay, Miss Helen B. Fay, Edwin A. Howes, Jr., M. N. Fay and H. Fay.

The Club is in a very prosperous condition, and the members are anxious only for good weather to start what gives promise of being a successful season.

REV. P. C. HEADLEY.

The Rev. P. C. Headley, so widely known as a clergyman and historical writer, whose death was briefly mentioned in our last issue, was born in Walton, N. Y., where his father presided over the Congregational Church for a great number of years. Early in life he studied law and was admitted to the bar of New York.

He afterwards took up the study of theology, and finally was ordained as a minister, being assigned to a church in Adams, Mass.

He afterwards had charge of pastorates in Sandwich, and Plymouth, and devoted much of his time to literary work.

Among other works which were the result of his fruitful thought, might be named, "Empress Josephine," "Louis Kosuth," "Napoleon," and "Women of the Bible."

He had a personal acquaintance with General Grant and Sherman, and wrote their lives, as also those of Sheridan and Mitchell. In fact his pen was never idle and gave to literature, in addition to the above works, "Court and Camp of David," "Evangelists in the Church," "Massachusetts in the Rebellion," and a score of other books, all characterized by a high literary style.

He has made his home in recent years with his daughter, Mrs. Ames, of Bloomfield street.

He also leaves another daughter, Mrs. E. A. Shaw of Massachusetts avenue, and three sons.

I. H. Headley is a chaplain in the United States Army at Fort Hancock, N. J., and another son, P. C. Headley, is a prominent cotton broker in New Bedford.

After the services at the home of Mrs. Ames the body was taken to New Bedford for burial.

HEMPLE QUOIN.

I read in one exchange that our fellow townsman Frank N. Bott was married on Jan. 1, 1903, in another Dec. 31, 1902 while to my astonishment another local paper promises matters by making it Dec. 32. If this is true my calendar is faulty. If there really were 32 days in December, what day is this any way?

A visitor to our town cannot fail to notice the display of hand and crosscut saws, as well as axes of different styles in their windows. Inquiry reveals the fact that since the scarcity of coal has become so apparent as to be felt by the most thoughtless citizen, the thoughts of the people turn to wood as a fuel, and the result has been that many monarchs of the forest have been laid low.

A dealer put it very plainly, it seems to me, when he said, "When a man only had to cut enough wood to start a fire in the morning, why any old saw would do; but now when he is forced by circumstances to use wood, and hard wood, nearly all the time, poor human nature demands the best the market affords." It is a fact that the sale of these articles has greatly increased, and the old adage still holds, "It is an ill wind that blows no good to anyone."

I heard a pretty good story on my rounds one day this week, that I think will bear printing. It seems a gentleman whom I have known for a long time had occasion, some years ago, to call a doctor one very cold and stormy night in winter. The doctor, an elderly, but much respected physician, answered the call, but he himself was so feeble because of age and other ills, was obliged to be carried from his own house to his carriage, and from his carriage to the room of his patient. He found the sick man in such poor condition that he ordered belladonna, and by mistake the patient got an overdose, and lapsed into unconsciousness. But thanks to a rugged constitution he recovered his senses, and as the doctor himself had almost collapsed, the sick man requested that the doctor be given a cup of coffee, which was done. Well, to be brief, the sick man improved, and the good old doctor was carried back to his carriage and driven home. Now the question agitating the man's mind is, did he need a doctor, or did the doctor need a nurse.

It happened just before the opening of the business part of a meeting of a certain society one evening this week, and the conversation drifted from horses to mustangs. The wit of the party or wag, if you wish to call him so, told how two of our now successful young men some years ago, purchased two of these handy, but ungovernable little beasts, and started to take them home. Here is the story as near as I can remember it. Tim waited to see how Madden would succeed in leading his mustang home, and this is how the deed was done. He got two long ropes, and managed to tie them about the neck of the tough Mexican pony, after which he would fasten one rope to a telegraph pole, and run along with the other to the next pole, hitch that, and go back to the first rope and move that up two poles. In this way he forced the mustang into town, but the work was slow, and the mustang tried every little while to kick the stars out of the sky. A bystander happened to make the remark, "you have got a pretty tough proposition there, I guess," when the young owner replied, "Yes; but you just look at the fellow behind, he has got a tougher one." Both would-be horsemen finally landed the ugly little beasts in their respective stables, and the next day Tim put a harness on his broncho, when he succeeded in kicking down a stall. The harness was finally secured upon him and he was hitched into an old buggy and Tim and a friend started to enjoy a drive. All went happy as a marriage bell, until a bicycle flashing a red light, burst suddenly upon the mustang's sight, when he gave an exhibition of high kicking, that would put a dozen Cyrenes to shame. He kicked, and he kicked until the buggy consisted of two parts that bore a slight resemblance to a wagon. One part consisted of a pair of wheels and part of a seat, which was owned in fee simple by Tim, and the other part consisted of a pair of shafts, owned and occupied by the mustang, and which he was fast, yes, very fast, Tim says at a mile a minute, separating from the wheels. The animal was finally caught and returned to his owner, and both Madden and Tim, and all their friends say that if the pair could be hitched up, the speed they could show would make John Shephard, and Fire Commissioner Scannel of New York, turn green with envy.

LEXINGTON

Pierce & Winn Coal company have received two car loads of hard coal.

The High school received a car load of Newcastle coal Tuesday, and the Hancock school has about 25 tons to the good.

The regular meeting of the Lexington lodge A. O. U. W. was held Tuesday evening, and arrangements were made for the installation of officers.

C. F. West and G. W. Spaulding scored one on the local coal dealers by securing a car load of coal each, on Tuesday last.

George Teague lost a valuable horse last week from what was decided to be skin glanders. The horse's spirited animal was taken sick with scores breaking out on its nose and forehead, and an expert veterinary was consulted, who decided that the animal should be killed. This was accordingly done by Mullers men, and the stable thoroughly cleansed and fumigated.

LEXINGTON.

The fire alarm in North Lexington proved itself all right last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Garfield of North Lexington has just had twenty tons of Welsh coal delivered to him by Contractor Gorman's teams.

Mrs. Schofield and family of Reed street have removed to Charlestown, and will spend the balance of the winter with her mother.

Joseph Trichus of Bedford street, will leave Lexington this week for his old home in New Hampshire.

The coasting on Concord hill never was better, and during the moonlight nights the hill is crowded with merry parties.

Mrs. W. H. Whitaker whose husband has just recovered from a severe illness, was herself taken down last week with the grip. With good care she is quite recovered and expects to be about as usual by the last of the week.

The people who use the North Lexington postoffice and incidentally take the car at that point, are pleased to see a time table of the street railway placed in a conspicuous place there, and also have a kind word to say for the Enterprise.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church held a sewing meeting in the church parlors last Wednesday, when a large supply of clothing was sent to the Baptist Bethel in Boston. Mrs. Roberts was in charge of the meeting.

The meeting held last Sunday evening in the Unitarian church, was a decided success despite the very stormy weather. One hundred and fifty people attended and listened to an instructive address by Rev. Mr. St. John of Boston. The pastor preached last Sunday morning to a large congregation on "The Value of Good Homes."

The work on St. Bridgid's parochial residence is progressing as fast as possible. The new heating apparatus is in working order, and the plasterers are rapidly finishing up their part of the work. The new addition when finished will consist of five rooms, which were much needed to meet the increasing demands of the parish. Services continue to be held in the basement on account of scarcity of coal.

At the meeting of the Monday club held last week a very interesting paper on Alexander Hamilton, was read by Mrs. B. F. Brown. Mrs. G. O. Davis read a paper on "Weakness of Congress" and Mrs. F. E. Ballard read a paper on "Articles of Confederation." The paper by Mrs. Brown was carefully prepared and evidenced much study on the part of its author.

The high wind of last Monday blew a sheet and some other articles of household use from a clothesline, and they landed on the tracks of the Lexington and Boston railway. A conductor on one of the cars removed the pieces and hung them on a barbed wire fence for safe keeping. It is safe to say that they will not need to be tied down with clothespins for safe keeping.

The Boston and Maine railroad have just shipped a large supply of good hard wood, all sawed in proper lengths, to the station here for use in the depot. The large pile, which is stacked on the platform, has a most inviting look, and many a wistful glance is cast toward it. Baggage-master Kelley keeps a watchful eye on it, however, and it is common report that he has counted the pieces.

Past Commander Charles S. Parker of Francis Gould Post G. A. R. of Arlington, will install the following officers of the Lexington Post G. A. R., on Thursday evening, January 15. Commander, Geo. N. Gurney; senior vice commander, Geo. H. Cutter; junior vice commander, C. G. Kauffmann; quartermaster, J. N. Norse; chaplain, G. W. Wright; sergeant-at-arms, George Flint; officer of the day, I. F. Burnham; officer of the guard, Samuel Davis; delegate, H. H. Tyler; alternate, George Flint. After the exercises a collation will be served.

Congressman Charles Q. Tirrell who represents this district in Washington, is anxious that all those who need seeds in his district shall have them. Most legislators are satisfied to perform the duties imposed upon them, but the following note will satisfy the voters of Lexington that Congressman Tirrell is the right man in the right place. We are glad to publish the note and desire that the congressmen have full credit for his interest in the citizens of his district. Congressman Charles Q. Tirrell is making up a list in his district to whom seeds will be forwarded free by the Agricultural Department. If any of our readers desiring seeds did not receive any last year, if they will forward their names and addresses to our Congressman at Washington, their names will be added to the list of those already furnished to him.

The following officers of the Home and Foreign Missionary Association of the Hancock church, were elected at its last meeting: President, Mrs. N. H. Merriam; vice-president, Mrs. C. F. Carter; recording secretary, Mrs. George A. Warner; treasurer, Miss Bertha Redman; trustee, Mrs. Charles C. Goodwin; Home Department, Mrs. Edward P. Nichols, Mrs. John Abbott; Foreign Department, Mrs. Goodwin, Mrs. D. W. Muzzey and Mrs. H. W. French; Mothers' Department, Mrs. C. F. Carter; Social Committee, Mrs. Frank D. Brown; Directors, Mrs. A. C. Washburne, Mrs. George N. Gurney, Mrs. Arthur L. Graves, Mrs. E. Peirce, Miss Sleeper and Mrs. Burr.

John Buckley who has just been elected a trustee of the Public Library in Cambridge, was born in this town in 1862 and received his education in our public schools, where he was noted for his studiousness, and a desire to acquire knowledge. When a resident here he always took a deep interest in town affairs, even as a boy. After graduating from school he accepted a position with a leading Boston business house, and by strict attention to duty, rose to the position of cashier. When going to school here, he was recognized as a ready debater and a fluent talker, and always kept in touch with public questions, both local and national. He has served as speaker of the Boston Young Men's Congress, and now acts as president of the Byrnt club in Cambridge. He has been a life long democrat, and his Lexington friends are particularly pleased over his success.

Among the Churches

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

At the annual meeting of the Samaritan society, in the church parlor on Thursday afternoon, the president, Mrs. Kimball, being absent, the vice-president, Mrs. Frank Frost, presided. The officers elected: President, Mrs. Albert Kimball; vice-president, Mrs. Frank Frost; secretary, Mrs. H. F. Fister; treasurer, Mrs. W. N. Winn; directors, Mrs. Frank Frost, Mrs. G. F. Coolidge, Mrs. George Brooks.

PLEASANT STREET CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Bradshaw Missionary Association is planning to give a Washington's birthday party in the vestry, February 23. It is to be a Colonial affair and supper will be served.

The annual meeting of the church will be held on Friday evening in the vestry of the church.

On the first Sunday in the year thirteen children were awarded books for constant attendance at Sunday School during the year, as follows: Lilian Wells, Dolly Borna, Florence Roden, Catherine Schwamb, Hazel Grey, Willie Roden, Gertrude Roden, Richard Sears, Byron Hardy, Laura Hardy, Isabel Gratto, Marshall Cloyd. Those absent but once; Raymond Lindsay, Margaret Bodenstein, Laurel Hardy, Howard Viets, Mima Waage, Carmeta Hope, and Ruth Borna.

The Endeavor Society met at half past six on Sunday, subject, Bringing others to Christ. Leader, F. I. West of Woburn. The meeting proved a very pleasing and helpful one, at it close the members went in a body to the Baptist church. A company of members and young people from the church went to the Chelsea hospital Sunday afternoon and held there a song service for the benefit of the inmates. To say they greatly appreciated it is putting it too mildly.

ARLINGTON BAPTIST CHURCH.

Last week was observed as "Week of Prayer," with special services on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. Tuesday evening the subject was, "The deeper needs of the church." Thursday it was an "Inspiration service," held in the main auditorium. Friday evening the meeting was especially interesting and helpful the topic being, "Christ, the Great Desire."

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

Services at St. John's church next Sunday, 7.30 a. m. Holy Communion; 10.30 a. m., morning prayer and sermon; 7.30 p. m., evening prayer and sermon. In the morning the rector preaches the fifth in the series of sermons on the Lord's Prayer, "The Father's Keeping." In the evening the subject is "A Question of Decision."

ARLINGTON BAPTIST CHURCH.

The regular literary meeting of the Young Ladies' Mission Circle was held with Mrs. Ralph Page, on Walnut street, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. James McWhinnie, superintendent of the Alaska work, gave a very interesting talk before the young ladies. Mr. Uperact spoke of the perils and tortures of a missionary's life, how he passed through the terrible experiences of the Boxer war, being stoned and left by the wayside for dead many times. Only those who heard of his remarkable experience and heroism, can fully appreciate his extraordinary power and life work. Dr. Watson presided over the service and Mr. W. Wood lead the congregational singing.

THE HANCOCK CHURCH.

Service at the Hancock church next Sunday will consist of preaching by the pastor, Rev. C. F. Carter, in the morning at 10.30. In the evening services will be held in the chapel and will include a piano voluntary by Miss Rose Morse, and singing by a mixed quartet consisting of Miss Bertha Redman, Miss Rose Morse, Arthur Tucker, and Lester Redman.

Rev. C. F. Carter, the pastor, will begin a series of sermons at the evening services on "God's Making of Man," taking for illustration typical instances from the old testament. As usual all are welcome to the services. The annual meeting of the church was held last Monday evening, at which the following officers were elected. Clerk, Geo. H. Emery; Treas., and Collector, Frederick R. Galloupe, Presidential Com., A. C. Washburne, and G. W. Spaulding, Irving Stone; Auditor, Dr. N. H. Merriam; Assessors A. C. Washburne, Lyman Lawrence; Music Com., C. C. Goodwin, Frank D. Brown; Supply Com., D. C. White, Irving Stone.

A. Hts.

Miss Cora Thompson has been confined to the house by illness.

Messrs Lawton and Preble who have leased the store in Crescent building on the corner of Massachusetts and Park Avenues, will have their opening on Friday, Jan. 16.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS BAPTIST CHURCH.

Tuesday evening the service was held at the home of Mr. Tingley when Mr. H. Frazer lead. Mrs. Descon Finley lead the meeting on Wednesday evening. This evening (Thursday) Mr. Dickie will lead at Mrs. H. Frazer's. Friday evening a full meeting is expected at the church, when Mr. Cann will lead. Following this meeting the standing committee of the church will meet.

There was a meeting of the C. E. Committees, on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. King.

A piano has been presented to the church through the generosity of a friend.

The Prayer service at 10.20 every Sunday morning has proved a great success.

Sunday morning the pastor preached on "A Characteristic of the Early Church," on its habits and customs, reviewing the history, unity and harmony of the early believers.

In the evening there was a song service, much improved through the aid of C. W. Schwamb who presided at the piano. Both services were well attended.

The Junior C. E. Society met at 3.30 in the afternoon.

Miss Annie Borden lead the Senior C. E. Topic, "Bringing others to Christ."

This is being observed as "Week of Prayer." Monday evening the meeting was at Mrs. King's on Westminster Avenue.

ANNUAL MEETING ST. JOHN'S PARISH.

The annual meeting of St. John's parish was held in the Parish House, Monday evening, January twelfth. The reports of the officers were presented and the following were elected for the coming year: Wardens J. W. Buhlert and Arthur Birch; treasurer, Arthur Birch; vestrymen, Messrs. G. O. Goldsmith, W. H. Thorpe, W. D. Elwell, Charles LeBuff, David Beattie and Paul Bissell; clerk, F. H. Hubbard.

It is a common question in speaking of a man who has made a success in business, "How did he build up such a business in so short a time." A careful diagnosis of these cases leads to but one answer—judicious advertising—C. J. Bailey, Boston.

FILED On June 14, a well-known gentleman of Lexington, Mass., fell from a Motor Cycle and received injuries which laid him idle for a few days.

He was insured against accident in the

but forgot to put in a claim until August 30. Technically he could not have collected anything on account of the lapse of time as all accidents should be reported promptly. The Company, however is not built that way. They paid the claim without a murmur. No Company can do business with me unless they are broad enough, and the Company not only fills the bill in that but in all other respects. If you are going on a journey I can sell you a short policy for 30c. per day, carrying $5000 in case of death. I have many other splendid propositions in accident insurance. Come in and see them.
